

Descriptive-Analytical Bibliography: A Review of Education of History Textbooks

Amir Karimi*1, Korosh Fathi2

1 History department, Law and Social Sciences department, Tabriz University, East Azarbaijan, Iran; and research lecturer of history education at Farhangian University.

2 Assistant Professor of History Department, Farhangian University, Alborz.

Abstract:

Less than a century has passed since the history of teaching history as a university in the world and although in different countries of the world, different books have been written and published for students, teachers and university professors, but in Iran, those interested in this field suffer from the lack of complete, comprehensive and diverse resources. Given the importance of bibliography in the growth and development of history education, the purpose of this study is to introduce and describe a limited number of books written in history education and to analyze them in the second place. The descriptive and analytical method of the present research has been done by searching in reputable scientific sites and reviewing 26 books published in Routledge publications on the subject of teaching history. Resources were analyzed in two main groups and five subgroups. Most of the sources have been published in the last two decades and their authors have a high scientific degree. The research findings develop the knowledge of interested people, encourage professors to study them and encourage translators to translate the mentioned works, discover research gaps and help researchers in this field to develop the quality of their research. Printing and translating textbooks for students and teachers in the field of history education can significantly compensate for existing weaknesses and lack of resources.
