

The Model World LIVE/Malc's Models exclusive Spitfire kit builds into a fine 1/72 scale model of MA621 as it was in 1966. The starter set includes the kit, basic paints, paint brush, glue and instructions.

BUILDING THE MODEL WORLD LIVE EXCLUSIVE AIRFIX SPITFIRE MK.IXc

If you are looking to build your first plastic kit there is no better place to start than an Airfix starter set. DAN EVASON builds the Model World LIVE/Malc's Models exclusive Spitfire Mk.IXc starter set.

Brand-new and available now exclusively through Key Model World and Malc's Models is this Airfix Spitfire starter set, but this one has a difference as it is the first ever Mk.IXc starter set to be produced by the firm and models MA621 which was part of 229 Squadron based at RAF Coltishall in England.

MA621 was flown by F/Sgt William A. Hookins (New Zealand), but didn't last long as during a mission to Southwold from RAF Coltishall, however, the return was diverted to Swannington due to fog, but MA621 stalled on approach leading to a crash landing which saw the airframe split in half lengthways. Fortunately, the pilot wasn't injured in the landing.

The kit uses Airfix's 1/72 scale Mk.IXc kit as its basis, but the designers at Airfix have gone the extra mile to create a comprehensive set of waterslide decals for application on the kit. In addition it comes with basic green and sea grey colours to paint the aircraft as well as a paint brush and instructions – everything you need to get started apart from a cutting mat, tweezers and a craft knife.

For this build we had a pre-production kit which meant that we had to substitute paint colours for the build. However, the overall finish is the same with the exception of using an airbrush for paint application. That said, you don't need an airbrush to paint a scale model as it is perfectly possible to recreate the sea grey and green camouflage of the RAF Spitfires with brush painting. A top tip here is to use Blu-Tack to form paint masks for the green to be applied over a base coat of grey.

We also introduce the use of AK Interactive's fantastic new collection of paint pens in this build. These fine quality pens allow detail painting to be completed so much more easily for beginners than working with a paint brush and paints.

The unique Mk.IXc starter set is only available from Key Publishing and Malc's Models and is a limited production model to replicate MA621. The following step by step guide explains how it was built from start to finish.

• Order your kit at www.keymodelworld.com/shop to start out in scale modelling. ■
