

★ EXRESSING EMOTIONS

ART THERAPY EXERCISE

PURPOSE OF THIS EXERCISE:

This exercise aims to help students in school settings understand and express their emotions through visual art. By creating visual representations of their feelings, students can gain insight into their emotional states and learn how to communicate them in healthy ways. This activity is especially beneficial for younger students who struggle to express their emotions verbally.

like happiness
their bodies.

4. Step 2: Assign Colors

- Invite students to choose a color that represents their emotions. For example, red for anger, blue for sadness, yellow for happiness, or green for calmness.

5. Step 3: Visual Expression of Emotions

- Once students have chosen their colors, ask them to create an abstract artwork that visually represents how they are feeling. They do not need to draw specific objects; instead, they should focus on using shapes, colors, and lines to express their emotions.

6. Step 4: Group Discussion

- After students complete their artworks, invite them to share their creations with the class (if they are comfortable). Lead a group discussion about how each artwork reflects different emotions.

Ask questions such as: "How did creating this artwork help you understand your feelings?" and "What was the easiest or hardest part about expressing your emotions?"
