Abstract: A new concept for Personal Communication that achieves the ultimate object of all communications systems, to enable anyone to communicate instantly with anyone else anywhere is proposed. This concept offers a personal area or network with subscriber access systems for both wired and radio terminals. Its three principal concepts are: (1) assigning a personal identity such as a Personal Telecommunication Number for an individual, and the network takes the person's routing; (2) serving like a portable unit for radio terminals; and (3) serving advanced functions such as the network playing the role of secretary. System architecture and some problems are also presented.

1. Introduction

Recently the information-intervening society has developed, and the social well-being of structure has changed to bring about a great change of people's behavior. In the communication world, demand for advanced services that enable us to communicate instantaneously with anyone anywhere is more and more increasing. In order to realize this type of communication service, many kinds of systems are being studied or developed, such as mobile, automobile radio communication (LM, PL), and advanced cordless systems (NIT, LRS, Telepoint, DCS, etc., LTRC, etc.).

In international standardization, CCIR standardized in 1981 is the preliminary stage discussed in most of the radio field approaches. In ITU-T SSG and SG5, SG6, in CCITT SG5, SG11, SGX 1, and SGX2, several subjects are discussed, for example, numbering, network functions, signaling, and so on (1)(11).

There are many problems involved in offering economic personal communication services to more than the million subscribers, because most commonly used individual numbers have been applied for radio systems. In radio systems, the problem of service utilization efficiency must be improved to accommodate an unlimited number of subscribers, and a radio area must cover at least three times 1000 square km. The radio area should also be rationalized to realize area which partially overlaps them and accompanied for large cities can be for service area. Furthermore, in order to ensure a sufficient number of service areas, a large number of radio systems has to be set, and the more subscribers more have to be provided in theory. In terms of the radio radius of 100 km, the number of service areas must be 100,000. Therefore, systems will increase the number of radio systems is inevitable. As a result, the existing system configuration methods will create very difficult problems in extending the service area.

For this reason we propose for a personal personal communication system in which such functions as location registration and transfer, exchange are handled by public communication network. Communication and service development can be realized by first developing communication network facilities as transport system. The proposed system enables area person to afford a portable telephone service in a large communication and increase capacity.

2. Service Concept

- Our proposed service concept is shown in Table 1.
- (1) Personal communication at anytime and anywhere by using Personal Telecommunication Number (PTN).
- (2) Customer-friendly terminals with both wired and radio terminals for various systems including very small equipment, laptop and portable.
- (3) Mobility services according to needs of area and purpose.

Radio service ranges are shown in Fig. 1. The proposed system enables us to use totally stationary telephone sets, both the radio terminals. Services are available anywhere, such as home, office, or outdoors. The mobility should be less than we expect in that of mobile phone. A personal mobility differentiated from the
