Advances In Tracer Methodology Volume 3:

Advances in Tracer Methodology Seymour Rothchild, 2012-12-06 The Eleventh Symposium on Advances in Tracer Methodology was held in Boston on October 13-14, 1966. The symposium, which was sponsored by the New England Nuclear Corporation, commemorated the tenth anniversary of the Corporation. The Symposia on Advances in Tracer Methodology, which have been held regularly since 1957, bring together research workers in a variety of disciplines who share an interest in radioactive tracers. The four volumes, this one representing the record of the Eleventh Symposium, provide a compact and readily available source of information, much of which was usually scattered throughout the scientific literature of interest to biochemists, pharmacologists, endocrinologists, and analysts for whom tracers have become an indispensable tool. The editor is especially grateful to Dr. Konrad Bloch, Harvard University, and Dr. Waldo E. Cohn, Oak Ridge National Laboratory, for chairing the sessions at the Eleventh Symposium. The cooperation of the speakers is deeply appreciated. In addition, a special bouquet to my secretary, Mrs. Edith Thompson, for her generous assistance in arranging the various symposia and the publication of the papers. S. R. Advances in Tracer Methodology, 1968. Vols. 1-4 are the Proceedings of the 5th-11th Symposium on Advances in Tracer Methodology, sponsored by the New England Nuclear Corp. and other industrial organizations. Vol. 1 also includes selected papers from the first four symposia, 1957-60.

Between Science, State and Industry B. Joerges, Terry Shinn, 2001-11-30 This book explores a little studied arena that exists between science and technology, an arena in which a singular and important variety of open-ended, multi-purpose instrumentation is developed by practitioners, neither scientists nor engineers call them research technologists for use in academia, industry, state metrology, and technical services, and considerably beyond. The generic instrumentation designed in this almost subterraneously institutionalized, professionalized, interstitial arena fuels both science and engineering work. This involves intermittent crossings of the boundaries that demarcate and protect the conventional cognitive and artefact cultures familiar to many historians and sociologists. Research technologists thereby comprise a distinctive but never distinct, transverse science and technology culture that generates a species of pragmatic universality which in turn provides multiple and diversified audiences with a common repertory of vocabularies, notational systems, images, and perhaps even paradigms. Research technology practitioners deliver a lingua franca that contributes to cognitive material and social cohesion. Research technology is about the complementarity between boundary crossing and the stability/maintenance of boundaries.

scientific research during the past twenty years particularly in bio chemistry and allied fields The rapid evolution of sophisticated instrumentation and labeling techniques during the past ten years has made possible on a routine basis exquisitely sensitive experiments which with other techniques would require Herculean efforts on the part of the investigator The Symposia on Advances in Tracer Methodology which have been held regularly since 1957 provide for research workers in biochemistry pharmacology endocrinology and medicine a focus on the numerous developments in the tracer field that are usually scattered throughout the scientific literature Volume 3 is a record of the proceedings of the Ninth and Tenth Symposia which were sponsored by the New England Nuclear Corporation and the Packard Instrument Company Inc Recent advances in tracer methodology as reflected by the papers in this volume have been mainly concerned with improved analytical techniques such as liquid scintillation counting autoradiography and chromatography and with novel applications of labeled compounds in biochemical and clinical problems Isotopes and Radiation Technology, 1969 Concepts in
