Vocal signals are central for social communication across a wide range of vertebrate species consequently it is critical to understand the mechanisms underlying the learning control and evolution of vocal communication Songbirds are at the forefront of research into such neural mechanisms Indeed songbirds provide a particularly important model system for this endeavor because of the many parallels between birdsong and human speech

Specifically 1 songbirds are one of the few vertebrate species that like humans learn their vocal signals during development 2 the processes of song learning and control in songbirds shares many parallels with the process of speech acquisition in humans and 3 there exist deep homologies between the circuits for the learning control and processing of vocal signals across songbirds and humans In addition because of the diversity of songbirds and song learning strategies songbirds offer a powerful model system to use the comparative method to reveal mechanisms underlying the evolution of song learning and production Taken together research on songbirds can not only reveal general principles underlying vertebrate vocal communication but can also provide insight into potential mechanisms underlying the learning control and processing of speech This volume will cover a range of topics in birdsong spanning multiple level of analysis Chapters will be authored by the world s leading experts on birdsong and will provide comprehensive reviews of the processes underlying song learning of the neural circuits for song learning and control as well as for the extraction and processing of song information of the selection pressures underlying song evolution and of genetic and molecular mechanisms underlying the learning and evolution of song The primary goals of this volume are to provide comprehensive integrative and comparative perspectives on birdsong and to underscore the importance of birdsong to biomedical research evolutionary biology and behavioral systems and computational neuroscience The target audience of this volume will be graduate students postdoctoral fellows and established academics and neuroscientists who are interested in mechanisms of communication from an integrative and comparative perspective The volume is intended to function as a high profile and contemporary reference on current work related to the learning control processing and evolution of birdsong This volume will have broad appeal to comparative and sensory biologists neurophysiologists and behavioral systems and cognitive neuroscientists who attend meetings such as the Society for Neuroscience the International Society for Neuroethology and the Society for Integrative and Comparative Biology Because of the relevance of birdsong research to understanding human speech it is likely that the volume will also be of interest to speech researchers and clinicians researching communication motor and sensory processing disorders
