

Karl Marx (II)

Labor theory of value → surplus value generated in the exchange between labor and capital → Market value vs. use-value

Marxists argue that the value of goods should be calculated in terms of the amount of labor that went into their production. Conventional economics does not do this; it takes as value whatever will be paid in the market place!

The amount of capital and labor purchased by the capital is greater than the amount of labor embodied in goods purchased from wages (subsistence).
