Biochemical Differentiation in Insect Glands W. Beermann, 2013-06-29 The majority of studies devoted to animal development traditionally start out from questions of morphogenesis Of course visible differentiation as well as the events leading to it should ultimately become describable in molecular terms Nevertheless even simple morphogenetic processes may have a complex biochemical basis which makes it difficult to recognize the key functions involved This difficulty obviously does not exist in the case of glands i e organs and tissues primarily concerned with and characterized by the nature of their products i e one or a few secretory proteins synthesized in huge quantities In these systems when we observe differences between different portions of a gland or when switches of the synthetic activity occur during development there is no question as to what we have to look for we are directly faced with the fact of differential protein synthesis and the problem of its control Insect glands in addition share other significant properties i e the absence of cell division during growth and concomitantly the formation of giant cells with polyploid or polytene nuclei This unique set of peculiarities can be fully exploited only if one compares various representative systems everyone of which when considered by itself might appear too exotic to invite generalization In the present volume the editors have endeavored to bring together contributions covering selected insect glands from various points of view including the developmental molecular genetic and cytogenetic aspects A Literature Survey on the Biochemistry of

Mechanisms of Differentiation Paul B. Fisher, 1990-08-27 Significant recent advances in cell culture technology now permit a detailed biochemical and molecular analysis of differentiation in both normal and tumor cells These studies are important in attempting to understand the complex factors involved in normal growth and development as well as the abnormalities associated with carcinogenesis Mechanisms of Differentiation Volumes I and II is comprised of review chapters addressing various topics of current interest in this important area of research Topics discussed include genes controlling differentiation changes in gene expression during differentiation induction of differentiation induction of differentiation as a mode of action of chemotherapeutic agents and the effect of cell shape growth factors and differentiation modulating agents on the differentiated cell phenotype Mechanisms of Differentiation is valuable to researchers involved in differentiation and development carcinogenesis cell biology chemotherapy and immunology Biochemistry of Cell Differentiation

Introduction to Modern Biochemistry Fourth Edition provides an understanding of the chemical background of biological phenomena This book discusses the concepts of generation and utilization of free energy Organized into 23 chapters this edition starts with an overview of the important role of amides in biochemistry This text then explores the chemical structure of proteins and describes the methods of determining the amino acids sequence of proteins Other chapters consider the role of genes in protein and enzyme synthesis This book discusses as well the significance of the submicroscopic structure of the cell in biochemical reactions The reader is also introduced to the chemistry of the carbohydrates The final chapter deals with biochemical functions of various organs including the digestive tract liver kidney nervous system muscles and connective tissues This book is a valuable resource for biologists biochemists scientists researchers and readers who are interested in the field of biochemistry Introduction to Modern Biochemistry 3e P Karlson, 1975-06-01 Introduction to Modern Biochemistry Fourth Edition provides a better understanding of the chemical background of biological phenomena. The book presents an introduction and a survey of the facts and concepts of biochemistry. The text is intended to be an instructional material. Topics of general importance such as the generation and utilization of free energy, the role of genes in protein and enzyme synthesis, and the importance of the submicroscopic structure of the cell in biochemical reactions are emphasized. No distinction between descriptive biochemistry and dynamic biochemistry is made for the sake of simplicity and better comprehension of concepts presented in the book. Students, biochemists, biologists, pharmacists, and medical practitioners will find this book as a good reference.
