Abstract— The head of the study program is the spearhead of success in a study program. So a head of a study program is required to have good leadership and management skills in order to be able to carry out his duties and functions correctly. The problem that arises is that the appointment of a head of a study program is often carried out not looking at some aspects or criteria, usually the appointment is subjective and based on how long he has been a lecturer in the study program. Even though the appointment of a study program head must be seen from many aspects and criteria, this is done because if you appoint a study program head who is not competent, it can result in not running well with the study program he leads. The criteria used in this research are Functional Position, Education, Working Period, Research, PKM Activities, Supporting Activities and Lecturer Achievement. To overcome this problem, a decision support system with the MAUT method is the right solution to use. The advantage of the MAUT method is that the calculation and decision-making process is faster because it can directly calculate the final evaluation value without the need to compare the importance weight values between criteria. This method will process the criteria values of each candidate so that the results will be more objective. In this study, the number of alternatives used was 6 data on the value of the prospective head of the study program. Based on the MAUT process, a decision was obtained that the chosen head of the digital business study program was a Candidate-01 lecturer with a value of 1.0.

I. INTRODUCTION

The use of technology as a reference in a decision decisions are not foreign for a company or organization, because technology in various fields at this time is very advanced very rapidly both in terms of speed and convenience[1]. Examples of the application of technology such as in the field of health[2], the field of agriculture (Wendra et al., 2020), the field of management[4], the field of Education [5], the field of environment[6] and many other applications.

Apart from the development of technology, various branches of technology have also emerged, such as expert systems[7], fuzzy systems[8], robotics[9], decision support systems [10], forecasting systems[11] and many other branches of technological science. In this study, the branch of technology applied is a decision support system, which in general can be interpreted as a computer-based system that can help decision making to solve certain problems[12].

The application of decision support systems is often applied to problems of a certain nature in their nature selection and is often also faced with complex decision alternatives as well as requires expert opinion. The application of DSS includes the selection of employees who are entitled to get rewards [13], the selection of the best state civil apparatus, with the results a system that is built only as a tool to provide information to the leadership as a consideration in making decisions[14], then for the selection of the best interns with the final result of the system built provides a sequence of employee assessments from the highest to the lowest based on the criteria used by the company[15]. In the decision support system, knowledge can be embedded in the form of algorithms or methods that function as data processing inputted by users who want to make decisions. These methods include the tophis method[16], the SAW method[17], the AHP method[18] and many more decision support system methods others. In this study, the method used was multi attribute utility theory (MAUT).

Where the MAUT method is a method that consists of several attributes (multi discrete criteria) the decision to create a model that prioritizes existing alternatives, while giving a relative weight called MAUT weight[19]. The Multi-Attribute Utility Theory (MAUT) approach is a quantitative comparison method that usually combines the measurement of various risks and costs of benefits. There are several alternatives for each of the existing criteria, which can provide solutions. The advantage of the MAUT method is that the calculation and decision-making process is faster because it can directly calculate the final evaluation value without the need to compare the importance weight values between criteria. The selection of this method is because it has been applied to decision making both in the organization and in solving non-organizational problems. The application of the MAUT method in this study is for the selection of the head of the digital business study program.

In the context of the world of education, the existence of leaders is important to carry out the work programs of educational institutions, especially in carrying out control over the work programs of these educational institutions[20]. The head of the study program is the spearhead of the success of a study program. So a head of
