

Introduction

Winston Churchill's speech "We Shall Fight on the Beaches" is one of the most famous speeches of the Second World War. Delivered on June 4th, 1940, it was a rallying call for the British people to continue fighting against the Nazis, despite the seemingly insurmountable odds, and has come to be seen as an iconic moment in history. This rhetorical analysis argues that Churchill's use of emotive language, rhetorical questions, and repetition helped to inspire hope in the British people and boost morale during a time of great need.
