A Traveller in War-Time Churchill, 2016-02-22

PREFACE I am reprinting here in response to requests certain recent experiences in Great Britain and France These were selected in the hope of conveying to American readers some idea of the atmosphere of what it is like in these countries under the immediate shadow of the battle clouds It was what I myself most wished to know My idea was first to send home my impressions while they were fresh and to refrain as far as possible from comment and judgment until I should have had time to make a fuller survey Hence I chose as a title for these articles intended to be preliminary A Traveller in War Time I tried to banish from my mind all previous impressions gained from reading I wished to be free for the moment to accept and record the chance invitation or adventure wherever met with at the Front in the streets of Paris in Ireland or on the London omnibus Later on I hoped to write a book summarizing the changing social conditions as I had found them Unfortunately for me my stay was unexpectedly cut short I was able to avail myself of but few of the many opportunities offered With this apology the articles are presented as they were written I have given the impression that at the time of my visit there was no lack of food in England but I fear that I have not done justice to the frugality of the people much of which was self imposed for the purpose of helping to win the war On very good authority I have been given to understand that food was less abundant during the winter just past partly because of the effect of the severe weather on our American railroads which had trouble in getting supplies to the coast and partly because more and more ships were required for transporting American troops and supplies for these troops to France This additional curtailment was most felt by families of small income whose earners were at the front or away on other government service Mothers had great difficulty in getting adequate nourishment for growing children But the British people cheerfully submitted to this further deprivation Summer is at hand It is to be hoped that before another winter sets in American and British shipping will have sufficiently increased to remedy the situation
