INTERNATIONAL KITE FESTIVAL

Every year on January 18, the skies of Gujarat, India, are filled with beautiful multi-colored kites, fluttering and swooping in the breeze. The festival of kites is part of the festival of Uttarayan, which marks the day when winter turns to spring, according to the Hindu calendar.

The festival marks the welcoming of the gods from their deep sleep throughout the winter months. It is also thought to be connected to the history of India's royalty, who loved the art of kite flying and used it as a way to show off their power and skills.

The festival is taken very seriously and preparations begin months before the big day. Some people make their own kites, but more often than not people return to their favorite kite makers, who create strong, colorful kites year after year.

People of all ages fill the streets and cover rooftops to fly kites and compete with one another. Family and friends sit each other, special foods are prepared, and from dawn until dusk the sky is full of kites of all shapes and sizes.

Although Uttarayan is celebrated all over Gujarat, the city of Ahmedabad has become famous for its celebrations and since 1992 has hosted the International Kite Festival as part of the official celebration of Uttarayan.

When the sun goes down, people send up bright, white kites that can be seen against the dark sky. Master kite-flyers send up "turbid" with long strings of brightly lit lanterns, all connected together, illuminating the night sky as the festival comes to an end for another year.

The kites are made from lightweight paper and bamboo, and are made to fly as long as possible.
