

Atomic spectra

- When electrons jump from the lower to the higher number orbits, they absorb a particular amount of energy and we can observe the absorption spectrum.
- When they fall back again they release the same amount of energy and we can observe the emission (bright-line) spectrum. The amount of energy absorbed or released in this way can be directly related to the wavelength at which we see the absorption and emission lines on the spectrum.
