Jim Whiting

Auguste Et Louis Lumiere:

Auguste & Louis Lumière and the Rise of Motion Pictures Jim Whiting, 2006 Discusses the invention of the cinematographe and how these two brothers made some of the first motion pictures Letters Auguste Lumière, Louis Lumière, 1995 The 28th December 1895 saw the first public viewing of the cinematograph a device invented by the Lumiere brothers These letters are a record of its eruption on the world stage providing insights not only into the history of the film world but into technology and the history of Victorian enterprise Not so much a literary correspondence as a series of excited telephone conversations the letters were written in the heat of the moment with an eagerness to communicate the thrill of discovery They also extend into the 20th century ending in 1953 with Louis Lumiere's assessment of what he had achieved with an invention he initially perceived as having no commercial potential The Lumiere Autochrome Bertrand Lavédrine, Jean-Paul Gandolfo, 2013-12-15 Louis Lumiere is perhaps best known in the U S for his seminal role in the invention of cinema but his most important contribution to the history of photography was the autochrome Engagingly written and marvelously illustrated with over 300 images The Lumiere Autochrome History Technology and Preservation tells the fascinating story of the first industrially produced form of color photography Initial chapters present the Lumiere family enterprise set out the challenges posed by early color photography and recount the invention rise and eventual decline of the autochrome which for the first four decades of the twentieth century was the most widely used form of commercial color photography The book then treats the technology of the autochrome including the technical challenges of plate fabrication described in step by step detail and a thorough account of autochrome manufacture A long final chapter provides in depth recommendations concerning the preservation of these vulnerable objects including proper storage and display guidelines There are also engaging portfolios throughout the book showcasing autochrome photographs from around the world as part of an initiative founded by the French banker Albert Kahn as well as engrossing testimonials by children of men who worked in the Lumiere factories in the early twentieth century The appendix includes transcriptions and facsimile reproductions from the Lumiere notebooks as well as original patent documents Inventing Cinema Benoît Turquety, 2025-10-01 With machines mediating most of our cultural practices and innovations obsolescence and revivals constantly transforming our relation with images and sounds media feel more unstable than ever But was there ever a stable moment in media history Inventing Cinema proposes to approach this question through an archaeology and epistemology of media machines The archaeology analyses them as archives of users gestures as well as of modes of perception The epistemology reconstructs the problems that the machines designers and users have strived to solve and the network of concepts they have elaborated to understand these problems Drawing on the philosophy of technology and anthropology Inventing Cinema argues that networks of gestures problems perception and concepts are inscribed in vision machines from the camera obscura to the stereoscope the Cinematographe and digital cinema The invention of cinema is ultimately seen as an ongoing process
