

Early Career

His first single was 'That's All Right Mom' which he recorded in 1954 when he was 19 years old.

It was played on a local radio station which saw that people listening in to find out who the singer was.

Fans

Elvis began performing locally, where he mixed dance moves and his looks made him much wild. He continued to work by day as an actor in a cinema and later as a truck driver.

His popularity grew and he soon began touring and performing in different cities with his band.

He was invited on to several local radio stations but his career meant he often didn't come across well on these stations.
