The Science Behind Smiling

Let's celebrate World Smile Day exploring why smiling is so important!

What happens when you smile?

Muscle Move: When you smile, special muscles in your face move. They pull the corners of your mouth up, and when you're really happy, your eyes crinkle too! This happens because your brain sends a message to your face saying, "Let's smile!"

Happy Chemicals: Smiling tells your brain to release "happy chemicals" called endorphins. These make you feel good inside, just like how you feel after playing your favourite game or eating your favourite food.

Why do we smile?

Showing Happiness: We smile when we feel happy, like when we see a friend, get a nice gift, or do something fun. Smiling is one way we show others that we are feeling good.

Spreading Happiness: When you smile at someone, they might smile back. This is because smiles are contagious, like catching the giggles! When we smile at others, it makes them feel good too.

Smiling is Healthy!

Stronger Body: Smiling can help your body stay healthy by fighting off germs. It's because smiling helps your body feel less stressed, and when you're relaxed, your body does a better job at keeping you healthy.

Smiling Makes Us Feel Better

Smile Helps Me to Make Friends

Helps Us Connect: Smiling is like a friendly signal. It lets others know we want to be kind or play together. Even if someone doesn't speak the same language, they'll understand a smile!

Trust and Friendship: When we smile, we're telling people that we're friendly and that they can trust us. This is why smiling is a great way to make new friends.

Boosting Mood: Did you know that smiling can make you feel happier even if you were feeling a little sad? Just by lifting the corners of your mouth, you send a message to your brain saying, "It's time to feel good!" It's like a magic trick you can use on yourself.

Calmng Down: Smiling can help calm you down when you're feeling nervous or scared. It helps your heart slow down and makes you feel more relaxed.
