

A Short History Of Japanese Literature

Japanese literature traces its beginnings to oral traditions that were first recorded in written form in the early eighth century after a writing system was introduced from China. The Kojiki (Record of Ancient Matters) and Nihon shoki (Chronicle of Japan) were completed in 712 and 720, respectively, as government projects. The former is an anthology of myths, legends, and other stories, while the latter is a chronological record of history. The Fudoki (Records of Wind and Earth), compiled by provincial officials, beginning in 713, describe the history, geography, products, and folklore of the various provinces.

The most brilliant literary product of the period was the Manyōshū (Collection of Ten Thousand Leaves), an anthology of 4,500 poems composed by people ranging from unknown commoners to emperors and compiled around 759. Already emerging was a verse form comprising 31 syllables (5-7-5, 7-7) known as tanka. In 905, the Kokin Wakashū or Kokinshū (Collection of Poems from Ancient and Modern Times) was published as the first poetry anthology commissioned by an emperor; its preface paid high tribute to the vast possibilities of literature.

Heian Period: 794-1185

During the Heian Period, the Japanese were fascinated with Chinese culture. The Imperial Court emulated Chinese fashion and customs while they pursued the arts. A noble was expected to be well-versed in literature, poetry, painting, dancing, calligraphy, and more. Noble men used the Chinese language in the same way that Medieval European nobles and priests used Latin. In Heian Japan, women were not allowed to speak Chinese. The period expected women to remain separate from men. They would converse through fabric blinds dividing rooms. Genji shows how great the difference was between the genders by having characters fall in love with each other based on their handwriting.

Classical Japanese literature generally refers to literature produced during the Heian period, what some would consider a golden era of art and literature. Genji Monogatari (early eleventh century) by Murasaki Shikibu is considered the pre-eminent masterpiece of Heian fiction and an early example of a work of fiction in the form of a novel. Other important works of this period include the Kokin Wakashū (905), a waka poetry anthology, and Makura no Sōshi (906), the latter written by Murasaki Shikibu, contemporary and rival, Sei Shōnagon, as an essay about the life, loves, and passions of nobles in the Emperor's court.

The 10th-century Japanese narrative, Taketori Monogatari, can be considered an early example of proto-science fiction. The protagonists of the story, Kaguya-hime, is a princess from the Moon who is sent to Earth for safety during a celestial war and is found and raised by a bamboo cutter in Japan. She is later taken back to the Moon by her real celestial family. A manuscript illustration depicts a disc-shaped flying object similar to a flying saucer.

The Kojiki is a collection. These are the great deities, Tenari and I and Amaterasu, the Sun Godde

The Genji Monogatari formed a critic. Artists lavishly illustrated scrolls depicting. Because of this, less well-off nobles
