

ART

Can Make a Better You!

How ART helps us grow and understand ourselves

REBALANCING

Viewing art that depicts situations and feelings outside of what we normally experience on a daily basis, helps us attain balance in our emotions. Art questions our moral reasoning, asking us to put aside our judgments and rethink the situation. Art encourages us to better ourselves by examining unfamiliar or negative issues. We gain balance through art by taking a moment to observe, judge, and appreciate things we don't normally see and our responses to them.

MEMORY

Artists not only preserve a visual reminder of a memory, but they also record the emotions associated with the memory. When we view the image, we relate it to our own past experiences.

SOLENESS

We can appreciate and identify with sorrow in a work of art. We are able to turn the sympathy we have for the subject to ourselves. It helps us see that sorrow can be beautiful and noble and still be one aspect of a good life.

SELF-UNDERSTANDING

Art helps us to complete our own thoughts and ideas. Sometimes a piece of art that perfectly captures a feeling or thought we have had that we couldn't express can help us feel and communicate. People express that self-understanding in the images we put on our posters, or wear on our t-shirts.

GROWTH

When we see a picture of something we haven't personally experienced or of an emotion that we don't have a personal context for we can take the time to think about it, read to it, and empathize with it.

APPRECIATION

We often miss seeing the average, everyday things that surround us. Art helps us to re-evaluate the value of ordinary things. It points out that things we don't normally see as beautiful as that.

HOPE

Art reminds us that there is beauty in the world that we can strive to see it, appreciate it, and have it. When we see a painting, sculpture or photograph of people or creatures experiencing things we want to experience, it can give us heart-warming feelings about it and encourage the hope in us.
