No matter where we stay whether in apt or house the ultimate goal is to find solace where you rest after a hard day's work however there is a fundamental difference in the nature or essence of that solace. This difference is constructed on the basis of the choice of living status of an individual. Apartment living and living in a house are two different lifestyles and it is more of a marriage of convenience rather than choice.

While apartment living is more of a social indulgence whereas living in house is a mode of seclusion. One tends to be more social where living in an apartment for the simple reason for the individuals needs to cooperate with the rest of the tenants or owners in the same building. This form of living is more like a salad bowl situation where there is a need to amalgamate with others and to maintain the norms and customs of the housing society. In sharp contrast living in a house evokes the authoritative right of a lifestyle that hardly needs any negotiated approach with the vicinity. Here the mode of living is more personal and in a way it can be termed as an autocratic term of life. So, apartment living can be associated with democratic co-existence with multiparty opinions, while living in house is practically a single party rule.

Another fundamental difference between living in house and living in apartment is the major issue of security. While it is true that depending on the apartment facility the security measure can be state-of-the-art with all the gadgets possible, the fact remains that still on one could ever be completely safe as an apartment life would be surrounded by various neighbors and their associates who would infiltrate in and out of the building or housing society in their own rights. A complete security system can monitor the whereabouts of the residents and their non-resident friend or family coming on a visit but it would never be able to judge their intentions. So, no security system can be secured enough while living in an apartment. On the other hand living in a house provides the complete independence of controlling this factor. Only the well known could be allowed to enter on the owner's discretion. That way it is possible for the people living in a house to control the security system and the responsibility of the security is completely on the people living in the house.

Responsibility is a major difference between apartment living and living in a house. Responsibility lies on the self in the case of house living while in an apartment it is
