Cognition & Emotion Jan De Houwer, Dirk Hermans, 2010-05-09 Emotions are complex and multifaceted phenomena Although they have been examined from a variety of perspectives the study of the interaction between cognition and emotion has always occupied a unique position within emotion research Many philosophers and psychologists have been fascinated by the relationship between thinking and feeling During the past 30 years research on the relationship between cognition and emotion has boomed and so many studies on this topic have been published that it is difficult to keep track of the evidence This book fulfils the need for a review of the existing evidence on particular aspects of the interplay between cognition and emotion The book assembles a collection of state of the art reviews of the most important topics in cognition and emotion research emotion theories feeling and thinking the perception of emotion the expression of emotion emotion regulation emotion and memory and emotion and attention By bringing these reviews together this book presents a unique overview of the knowledge that has been generated in the past decades about the many and complex ways in which cognition and emotion interact As such it provides a useful tool for both students and researchers alike in the fields of social clinical and cognitive psychology

An Investigation of Automatic Affective Processing Elizabeth Amanda Martin, 2013 An important mechanism in emotional functioning is automatic affective processing In Study 1 people with schizophrenia n 48 and a non psychiatric comparison group n 28 completed an affective priming and cognitive priming task Relative to controls people with schizophrenia exhibited decreased affective priming but increased cognitive priming In addition decreased affective priming was associated with increased anhedonia In contrast increased cognitive priming was associated with increased disorganized and negative speech symptoms Overall these results suggest that there is an automatic affective processing deficit in schizophrenia and this deficit is related to anhedonia In Study 2 the neural correlates of automatic affective priming were investigated Undergraduate participants n 21 completed the affective priming task with 2 different consistency proportions CP 80 and 50 For the 50 CP condition there appeared to be evidence of increased controlled processing In particular comparing congruent trials in the 80 and 50 CP conditions there was less priming related decreases in inferior frontal and inferior temporal regions and increased activation in the dmPFC emotional conflict region for the 50 CP condition Overall these results suggest that automatic affective processing is associated with increased semantic priming and decreased emotional conflict

Mechanisms Giulia Mattavelli, Alessia Celeghin, Noemi Mazzoni, 2021-06-23 Emotion and Social Structures Christian von Scheve, 2014-07-16 The past decades have seen significant advances in the sociological understanding of human emotion. Sociology has shown how culture and society shape our emotions and how emotions contribute to micro and macro social processes. At the same time, the behavioral sciences have made progress in understanding emotion at the level of the individual mind and body. Emotion and Social Structures embraces both perspectives to uncover the fundamental role of affect and emotion in the emergence and reproduction of social order. How do culture and social structure influence the cognitive and bodily basis of emotion? How do large scale patterns of feeling emerge? And how do emotions promote the coordination of social action and interaction? Integrating theories and evidence from disciplines such as psychology, cognitive science, and neuroscience, Christian von Scheve argues for a sociological understanding of emotion as a bi-directional mediator between social action and social structure. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of the sociology of emotion, microsociology, and cognitive sociology, as well as social psychology, cognitive science, and affective neuroscience.

The Psychopath Hugues Herve, John C. Yuille, 2017-09-25 The Psychopath: Theory, Research, and Practice is a comprehensive review of the latest advancements in the study of psychopathy.
