Handbook of Natural Language Processing and Machine Translation Joseph Olive, Caitlin Christianson, John McCary, 2011-03-02 This comprehensive handbook, written by leading experts in the field, details the groundbreaking research conducted under the breakthrough GALE program. The Global Autonomous Language Exploitation program, within the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), placed it in the context of previous research in the fields of natural language and signal processing, artificial intelligence, and machine translation. The most fundamental contrast between GALE and its predecessor programs was its holistic integration of previously separate or sequential processes. In earlier language research programs, each of the individual processes was performed separately and sequentially: speech recognition, language recognition, transcription, translation, and content summarization. The GALE program employed a distinctly new approach by executing these processes simultaneously. Speech and language recognition algorithms now aid translation and transcription processes, and vice versa. This combination of previously distinct processes
