Being American in Europe, 1750-1860 Daniel Kilbride, 2013-05-15 When eighteenth and nineteenth century Americans made their Grand Tour of Europe what did they learn about themselves While visiting Europe In 1844 Harry McCall of Philadelphia wrote to his cousin back home of his disappointment He didn't mind Paris but he preferred the company of Americans to Parisians Furthermore he vowed to be an American heart and soul wherever he traveled but particularly in England Why was he in Europe if he found it so distasteful After all travel in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries was expensive time consuming and frequently uncomfortable Being American in Europe 1750 1860

tracks the adventures of American travelers while exploring large questions about how these experiences affected national identity Daniel Kilbride searched the diaries letters published accounts and guidebooks written between the late colonial period and the Civil War His sources are written by people who while prominent in their own time are largely obscure today making this account fresh and unusual Exposure to the Old World generated varied and contradictory concepts of American nationality Travelers often had diverse perspectives because of their region of origin race gender and class Americans in Europe struggled with the tension between defining the United States as a distinct civilization and situating it within a wider world Kilbride describes how these travelers defined themselves while they observed the politics economy morals manners and customs of Europeans He locates an increasingly articulate and refined sense of simplicity and virtue among these visitors and a gradual disappearance of their feelings of awe and inferiority
