Agroforestry Systems In The Tropics:

Agroforestry Systems in the Tropics P.K. Nair, 1989-03-31 This book consolidates the descriptive results of a pantropical project called Agroforestry Systems Inventory AFSI undertaken by the International Council for Research in Agroforestry ICRAF from 1982 to 1987 Since agroforestry was a relatively new term when the project was initiated the main objective was to increase the understanding of and provide a state of the art information base on existing agroforestry systems Therefore the project was designed to systematically collect collate synthesize and disseminate information on existing agroforestry systems in developing countries One of the major results of the project descriptions of existing agroforestry systems was published as a series of articles in Agroforestry Systems These system descriptions form the bulk of this book Other products of the project include a microcomputer database on agroforestry systems practices and components and voluminous unpublished reports and records Perhaps the title of the book is misleading in that the book does not include or cover all existing agroforestry systems in the tropics and geographical regions in the tropics Additionally some of the systems described are outside the tropical boundaries of 23.5° N and S latitudes For the purpose of this book the word tropics is used in a general sense to also include subtropical developing countries that have agro ecological and socio economic characteristics and land use problems similar to those of the countries within the geographical limits of the tropical belt Tropical

Agroforestry Alain Atangana, Damase Khasa, Scott Chang, Ann Degrande, 2013-10-29 Agroforestry is recognized as a sustainable land use management in the tropics as it provides environmental friendly ecosystems it also provides people with their every day need for food and cash Since the recognition of agroforestry as a science curricula have been developed for agroforestry programs for undergraduate and graduate trainings in Universities Therefore there is an urgent need to develop and make available educational material This textbook strives to provide up to date information on tropical agroforestry to serve as educational material in the tropical context The authoritative textbook of Nair 1993 on agroforestry was published 18 years ago and before the advent of tree domestication an important agroforestry practice today In addition many other research activities such as carbon sequestration and integrated pest management have been included in the agroforestry agenda This textbook is intended for agroforestry students teachers and practitioners An Introduction to Agroforestry

K. Ramachandran Nair, C.R. Latt, 2013-04-18 Large areas of the warm humid tropics in Southeast Asia the Pacific Latin America the Caribbean and Africa are hilly or mountainous Jackson and Scherr 1995 estimate that these tropical hillside areas are inhabited by 500 million people or one tenth of the current world population many of whom practice subsistence agriculture The region most affected is Asia which has the lowest area of arable land per capita Aside from limited areas of irrigated terraces most of the sloping land which constitutes 60% to 90% of the land resources in many Southeast Asian countries has been by passed in the economic development of the region Maglinao and Hashim 1993 Poverty in these areas is often high in contrast to the relative wealth of irri gated rice farms in lowland areas that benefited from the green revolution Rapid population growth in some countries is also exacerbating the problems of hillside areas Increasingly people are migrating from high potential lowland areas where land is scarce to more remote hillside areas Such migra tion together with inherent high population growth is forcing a transforma tion in land use from subsistence to permanent agriculture on fragile slopes and is creating a new suite of social economic and environmental problems Garrity 1993 Maglinao and Hashim 1993 An
