British Shipbuilding And The State Since 1918:

British Shipbuilding and the State Since 1918 Lewis Johnman, Hugh Murphy, 2002 Few industries attest to the decline of Britain's political and economic power as does British shipbuilding in its near disappearance in the course of the twentieth century. On the eve of the First World War British shipbuilding produced more than the rest of the world put together. But by the 1980s the industry which had dominated world markets and underpinned British maritime power accounted for less than one per cent of world output. Throughout this decline a remarkable relationship developed between the shipbuilding industry and the Government as both sought to restore the fortunes and dominance of this once great enterprise. This book is the first to provide an industry analysis of this period based on the full breadth of primary sources available. It blends the records of central Government with those of the Shipbuilding Employers' federation and the Shipbuilding Conference as well as records from individual yards, technical societies and the trade press. Shipbuilding and Ship Repair Workers around the World Raquel Varela, Hugh Murphy, Marcel Linden, 2025-10-01 Maritime trade is the backbone of the world's economy. Around ninety percent of all goods are transported by ship and since World War II shipbuilding has undergone major changes in response to new commercial pressures and opportunities. Early British dominance, for example, was later undermined in the 1950s by competition from the Japanese who have since been overtaken by South Korea and most recently China. The case studies in this volume trace these and other important developments in the shipbuilding and ship repair industries as well as workers' responses to these historic transformations. Britain and the Sea Glen O'Hara, 2010-06-30 O'Hara presents the first general history of Britons' relationship with the surrounding oceans from 1600 to the present day. This all-encompassing account covers individual seafarers, shipborne migration, warfare and the maritime economy as well as the British people's maritime ideas and self-perception throughout the centuries. Bridging the Seas Larrie D. Ferreiro, 2020-01-21 How the introduction of steam, iron and steel required new rules and new ways of thinking for the design and building of ships. In the 1800s shipbuilding moved from sail and wood to steam, iron and steel. The competitive pressure to achieve more predictable ocean transportation drove the industrialization of shipbuilding as shipowners demanded ships that enabled tighter scheduling, improved performance and safe delivery of cargoes. In Bridging the Seas, naval historian Larrie Ferreiro describes this transformation of shipbuilding, portraying the rise of a professionalized naval architecture as an integral part of the Industrial Age. Picking up where his earlier book Ships and Science left off, Ferreiro explains that the introduction of steam, iron and steel required new rules and new ways of thinking for designing and building ships. The characteristics of performance had to be first measured then theorized. Ship theory led to the development of quantifiable standards that would ensure the safety and quality required by industry and governments and this in turn led to the professionalization of naval architecture as an engineering discipline. Ferreiro describes among other things the technologies that allowed greater predictability in ship performance, theoretical developments in naval architecture.

From East of Suez to the Eastern Atlantic Edward Hampshire, 2016-04-15 Exploring British naval policy during the first two governments of Harold Wilson 1964-70 this book analyses how the Navy Department of the Ministry of Defence and the Navy's professional leadership dealt with six years of defence reviews retrenchment and strategic reorientation This period witnessed a dramatic blow to the service's self image and self confidence as a result of the cancellation of the large CVA 01 aircraft carrier and a gradual process of realignment reorientation and adaptation to the changed political environment resulting in a recovery of self confidence a new strategy and the approval in principle of a class of small aircraft carriers Taking advantage of the recently released official records the study highlights for the first time just how in practice Mountbatten managed to dominate the Chiefs of Staff machinery and how his power was undermined and diminished It also demonstrates that contrary to widespread historical opinion Denis Healey was not necessarily set against carrier air power from his arrival in office and was willing to consider the procurement of a medium carrier for the navy Furthermore the work highlights the importance of the Mediterranean in the rehabilitation and renewal of self confidence by the navy in the late 1960s Although focusing primarily on policy and strategic matters the book incorporates wider historical consideration reviewing other factors that influenced policy making such as foreign policy financial resources materiel manpower and recruitment in addition to the administrative machinery and the cultural environment of the time In so doing Dr Hampshire offers a vivid insight into the interactions of government and military at a critical juncture in the changing nature of Britain's global role
