

The principle of unanimity refers to the decisions within the ASEAN on a particular issue would only be made after the organization meets an agreement through consensus. This principle focuses on promoting mutual respect and equal sovereignty among all member states. Both principles are important for the continuity of ASEAN. These principles have been rooted in the deepest part of ASEAN as an organization, and the member states within ASEAN have long implemented these principles. Many policies have been made and adjusted in response to these principles, especially the policies between member states. Without these principles, ASEAN would struggle to maintain the discussion, policies, and agreements, given the various and unique backgrounds of each of the member states.

Although the abolishment of the principles suggests that it would cause problems and difficulty for the ASEAN as an organization and also its member states, some people believe that the abolishment of it is not entirely bad for them. One example of this comes from the idea that the abolishment of the principle of non-interference would push more integration between the member states.⁴ More integration as a result would create a better collaboration between them. In comparison to other existing organizations such as the European Union, the European Union's success in integrating Europe may teach ASEAN one or few lessons from it. For instance, the response of ASEAN against the Civil War in Myanmar. The Myanmar Civil War in 2021 was a case that is often discussed within ASEAN.

The war has affected the children and the lives of people there; many have been killed by the war, and a lot of people had to flee from their homes. ASEAN's response plays an important role in this case. However, many argue that ASEAN's response to this case was "defective", given its role as a regional organization.⁵ There were some responses made by the ASEAN towards the Myanmar Civil war; one of them was to emphasize the "five-point consensus". Five-point consensus consists of a quick end to violence in the country, dialogue among all parties, the appointment of a special envoy, humanitarian assistance by ASEAN; and the special envoy's meeting in Myanmar with all parties.⁶ However, the consensus has been marked as failed due to the Myanmar Junta announcing that the suggestion made by the ASEAN would only be considered after the situation returned to "stability".⁶ The ASEAN in this case has failed in pressing the Myanmar Junta to end its human rights violations.
