New century: tech tipping point and evolving emphasis

This is the second of two editions looking back at 40 years of Gastineau Heritage News, published beginning in 1984 to share local history before there was internet. This issue includes excerpts since 2004. Nearly 100 editions of GHN are available for download, $5 each, at juneauhistory.org

In many ways, 2004 marked a shift of how local history was rendered. Technology made it more accessible and GHN broadened its focus.

Just a few months earlier, the Alaska State Library's digital archives went online. In 2004 (the year Facebook was created), GHN subscribers for the first time were asked for their email.

In 2005, the Juneau-Douglas City Museum debuted Digital Bob, a searchable database of columns by historian R.N. "Bob" DeArmond. (See p. 8.)

That same year, the Library of Congress unveiled a website for digitized newspapers dating back to 1756.

GHN increasingly published stories about Alaska Native experiences.

Rapidly, local history became searchable, sharable, and more varied.

In retrospect, a symbolic coincidence occurred in 2004: Juneau's oldest historic structure, the C.W. Young building at Front and Seward, burned. In its spot 11 years later rose the Sealaska Heritage Institute's Walter Soboleff Building, a center for Native arts and culture. In 2023, the name of the street it faces was changed to "Heritage Way," replacing "Seward" named for William H. Seward, former Secretary of State who brokered the sale of Alaska (unceded Native-occupied land) from Russia to the U.S. in 1867.

Transition of Dzantik'i Heeni amongst early work of esteemed author

In 2007, author Ernestine Saankallaxt Hayes won the American Book Award for her memoir Blonde Indian published in 2006. In February, 2006, GHN featured Hayes's, "Dzantik'i Heeni in Transition," about the Juneau Indian Village (see p. 6.) Today, Hayes is a UAS emerita professor and widely published. The Tao of Raven came out in 2016 and she was Alaska State Writer Laureate, 2017-2018. Hayes is Tingit of the Eagle moiety of the Wolf house, Kaagwaantaan clan.

time Korea served as an important territory for the global expansion of the American and Japanese film industries and after the late 1930s Koreans functioned as key figures in the co production of propaganda films that were designed to glorify loyalty to the Japanese Empire For these reasons and as a result of the tensions created by divided loyalties the history of cinema in Korea is a far more dynamic story than simply that of a national cinema struggling to develop its own narrative content and aesthetics under colonial conditions
