The Psychological Well-being of East Asian Youth Chin-Chun Yi, 2012-10-12 The rapid social change in the East Asia has brought great research attention on the family education and political impacts The growth trajectory of the next generation is exposed to an entirely different context owing to the dual effects of traditional and modern values as well as practices This book provides an overall picture of the developmental trajectory of Taiwanese youth as a typical example in the region The time frame is set from early adolescence 13 years old to young adulthood 22 years old Individual psychological well being in its broad definition will be used as the outcome indicator to reflect significant developmental processes during this important transitional life course Benefitted from the rare panel datasets conducted from 2000-2009 this book has two major focuses one is to explore the interplay among family school and community with regard to their influence on the individual growth patterns the other is to highlight the potential constraint and or strength of the prevailing social norms and values shared among East Asian societies To be specific different chapters will describe and analyze the life chances and growth patterns among youth with different social capitals including family SES educational achievement rural urban residence etc Their short term versus long term outcome as indicated by various psychological well being variables e.g. depressive symptoms deviant or problem behaviors happiness educational performance will allow us to delineate the particular structural context that individual East Asian youth encounters and to offer constructive suggestions on family interaction educational strategy as well as health related policies based on the scientific evidence This book incorporates comparative reports from other East Asian societies and from youth panel studies of Australia and the U.S. The experience of their counterpart in the advanced societies will contribute to readers understanding of the particular social situation that East Asian youth is embedded in the growth process In addition comparative perspective will enable the reader to contemplate on the potential future development of the affluent generation in the region Since changing social structure occurred in the last few decades in the East Asia has suffered inadequate investigation in the realm of family education and community this book provides timely information to fill up the gap Analyses of the valuable dataset from early adolescents to young adults will attract those who are interested in family researches in youth studies in panel data analyses as well as in the social development in Taiwan and in East Asia

Russell, Lisa J. Crockett, Ruth K. Chao, 2010-06-25 The relationships between children and their parents are the building blocks for family relationships throughout life. The nature of the parent-child relationship begins with parenting the practices and strategies that parents engage in as they raise their children. Parenting during childhood sets the stage for parent-adolescent relationships. These relationships make a critical difference during the teenage years; we know that when parent-adolescent relationships are healthy and strong, adolescents are more likely to have high aspirations and achievement and to make healthier choices when it comes to risk-taking. Most of the research in this field has been based in the United States and has been conducted through studies of European American families. Yet a growing body of research suggests important ethnic differences in styles of parenting and the qualities characterizing the parent-adolescent relationship. In this area of research, most existing studies have examined ethnic and cultural group differences using widely accepted measures and concepts of parenting. Comparative studies assume that dimensions of parenting such as parental warmth or control have the same meaning across cultures; however, given that conceptualizations of adolescent parent relationships have been developed and tested on samples comprised largely of European Americans, we cannot rule out the possibility that the way we understand parenting has been shaped by the predominantly Western and U.S.-focused research in this field.

Projecting Words, Writing Images John R. Leo, Marek Paryz, 2011-08-08. This compilation of essays by 20 scholars trained in comparative literatures, art history, critical theory, and American cultural studies further explores and expands the spirited and energetic field of visual cultural studies and its cognate or supplemental projects of visual practices and visual literacy. Their topics and perspectives engage contemporary re-theorizations of text of word and image while their alignments, ruptures, slippages, and aporias fall across a range of media practices and institutions. These include photography and exhibition, film, television, entertainment, journalism, poetry, and literature as visual and spectacular performances and graphic narratives but also their discursive intersections with race and ethnicity, their conjugations of gender, their tense and constitutive relations within multiple public spheres and post-modernities.

Handbook of Cultural Health Psychology Shahe S. Kazarian, David R. Evans, 2001-08-24. The Handbook of Cultural Health Psychology discusses the influence of cultural beliefs, norms, and values on illness, health, and health care. The major health problems that are confronting the global village are discussed from a cultural perspective. These include heart disease, cancer, HIV/AIDS, pain, and suicide. The cultural beliefs and practices of several cultural groups and the unique health issues confronting them are also presented. The cultural groups discussed include Latinos, Aboriginal peoples, people of African heritage, and South Asians. The handbook contributes to increased personal awareness of the role of culture in health and illness behavior and to the delivery of culturally relevant health care services. Many societies are culturally diverse or becoming so; the cultural approach is a unique and necessary addition to the health psychology area. Satisfies the ever-increasing appetite of health psychologists for cultural issues in health and women's health issues. Major and global health concerns are covered, including heart disease, cancer, HIV/AIDS, pain, suicide, and health promotion. The health beliefs and practices of Latinos, people of African heritage,

Aboriginal peoples and South Asians are presented without stereotyping these cultural groups The handbook provides excellent information for health care researchers practitioners students and policy makers in culturally pluralistic communities References are thorough and completely up to date
