African Insectivora And Elephantshrews:

African Insectivora and Elephant-shrews Martin E. Nicoll, Galen B. Rathbun, IUCN/SSC Insectivore, Tree-Shrew, and Elephant-Shrew Specialist Group, 1990 The three mammalian orders Insectivora Scandentia and Macroscelidea all comprise small terrestrial mammals that are primarily adapted to an insectivorous diet In general we know very little about the threats facing the African Insectivora and elephant shrews However the little we know suggests that they tend to be at risk from habitat modification rather than from direct exploitation of the species themselves Both on the African mainland and on Madagascar there are several centres of exceptional diversity and endemism for these species These centres are identified in this Action Plan and the principal conservation priority is the maintenance of sufficient areas of suitable habitat in these centres

Eurasian Insectivores and Tree Shrews R. David Stone, IUCN/SSC Insectivore, Tree-Shrew, and Elephant-Shrew Specialist Group, 1995 This Action Plan highlights the biological importance of these species reviews current knowledge and identifies those at risk and the causes critical areas for conservation and specific conservation projects

BOOK JACKET

Swallowtail Butterflies T. R. New, N. Mark Collins, 1991 This is the first insect Action Plan prepared by the IUCN Species Survival Commission and was chosen because swallowtail butterflies are perhaps the most charismatic to non entomologists Some are the largest butterflies which exist and the birdwings in particular have long excited wonder and comment among naturalists of all persuasions Out of a total of 573 species 170 are considered to need conservation action This Action Plan exemplifies the wide ranging conservation needs of swallowtails by selecting a geographically broad suite of faunas and individual taxa for priority conservation action Endangering processes are accelerating alarmingly in most of the regions listed for attention The plan covers 34 regions throughout the world considering within each region the conservation status of particular species action needed and how projects could be undertaken together with an indication of costs involved rhinoceros have become flagship species for international conservation. They are significant not only for the continuation of a major evolutionary heritage but also as symbols for the protection of African savannahs. The battle for the survival of these species has been marked by some notable successes and sadly many failures and the situation is still critical. The international horn trade ban and the domestic bans imposed in most traditional user states have driven the trade further underground in some cases inflating prices and making illegal dealing even more lucrative. This Plan is aimed at donors, government and non government organizations and all those involved in rhino conservation. It outlines the actions and strategies needed to catalyse support for these majestic animals and help secure their future in sub Saharan Africa. The overall conclusion is that given the political will, stability and adequate field expenditure rhinos can be conserved in the wild.

African Rhino Richard Emslie, 1999 The black and the white

Tapirs Daniel M. Brooks, Richard E. Bodmer, Sharon Matola, 1997. Descended from a long and ancient lineage, tapirs are important tropical forest seed dispersers. However, today all species of tapirs are threatened to various degrees by habitat destruction and hunting. This action plan was written with wildlife biologists, ecologists, administrators, educators and local conservation officials in mind and is aimed at those countries with tapir populations. It provides a brief natural history of each species and its objective is to aid in their conservation by catalyzing conservation action. In addition, it is hoped that the contents of the plan will stimulate further research into this fascinating group of animals.

North American Rodents

David J. Hafner, 1998. The first comprehensive treatment of North American rodents of conservation concern. This action plan summarizes the rodent fauna of North America and provides available information on every rodent taxon that has been considered to be of conservation concern by state, provincial and private conservation agencies and regional experts. It is hoped that the survey provided in this action plan will serve as a common ground for all these parties in drawing up conservation strategies for rodents.

Conifers Aljos Farjon, 1999. Conifers are one of the world's most important resources of timber. If managed wisely and used sustainably, these resources will provide wood for a multitude of purposes virtually indefinitely. Additional products include resins and their derivatives and even medicinal extracts, for example taxol, now used in the treatment of cancer. Conifers occur on all continents except Antarctica. Of the 630 species, 355 are listed as of conservation concern, with 200 or 25 of species threatened with extinction. Although exploitation of these resources is as old as civilization, this century has seen a dramatic increase in the exploitation of timber resources. This action plan assesses conifer diversity and its threats. It is unique among IUCN's Plant Action Plans so far published in that it gives the complete global red list of conifers using the 1994 IUCN Red List Categories and criteria. Data is analyzed to identify conifer hot spots where conservation should be a priority and a short list of threatened species is prioritized.
