globalization population growth and displacements migration is now a fact of life in a constantly shifting economic and political world order This book contributes to the discourse on the beneficiaries benefactors and the casualties of African displacement While the few existing studies have emphasized economic motivation as the primary factor triggering African migration this volume treats a range of issues economic socio political pedagogical developmental and cultural Organized with a multidisciplinary thrust in mind this book argues that any discussion of African migration whether internal or external must be conceived as only one aspect of a more complex organic and global patterning of flux and reflux necessitated by constantly shifting dynamics of world socio economic cultural and political order The Human Cost of African Migrations ,

The Cambridge History of Global Migrations: Volume 2, Migrations, 1800–Present Marcelo J. Borges, Madeline Y. Hsu, 2023-06-01 Volume II presents an authoritative overview of the various continuities and changes in migration and globalization from the 1800s to the present day Despite revolutionary changes in communication technologies the growing accessibility of long distance travel and globalization across major economies the rise of nation states empowered immigration regulation and bureaucratic capacities for enforcement that curtailed migration One major theme worldwide across the post 1800 centuries was the differentiation between skilled and unskilled workers often considered through a racialized lens it emerged as the primary divide between greater rights of immigration and citizenship for the former and confinement to temporary or unauthorized migrant status for the latter Through thirty one chapters this volume further evaluates the long global history of migration and it shows that despite the increased disciplinary systems the primacy of migration remains and continues to shape political economic and social landscapes around the world The African Diaspora in the United States and Europe John A. Arthur, 2016-04-01 This book systematically documents the experiences of Ghanaian communities in North America as a case study of the new African migration The rapid increase in the number of Ghanaians lawfully admitted as permanent residents since 1980 offers an opportunity to investigate their immigrant journeys their membership in the larger society and the expression of their individual and collective social identities Using original empirical data from the US and Canada as well as comparative material from the UK and the Netherlands the author also investigates the relationship between these new African migrants and the native born black diaspora in the US This study balances theoretical insight with policy implications using the case study as a lens not just on African migration but also on significant conceptual themes in migration studies including transnationalism identity social networks remittances economic integration and citizenship From Intraregional West African Migration toward an Exodus to Europe. A Case Study on Ghana Lamin O. Ceesay, 2017-02-23 West Africa s patterns of migration in pre colonial and early post colonial times were predominantly internal and regional from landlocked Sahelian countries to relatively prosperous mines plantations and coastal cities This was very significant in ensuring quality brain and skills circulation in the region Out migration to Europe despite the numerous benefits that come along with it remains a huge problem for the region and very worrisome to policy makers As the previous significant brain and skills circulation that existed in the region has shifted to Europe it paralysed its human and socioeconomic development efforts On the other hand it is a huge and an unbearable burden on the social welfare system and job market of Europe Considering the problematic and worrisome nature of unskilled semi skilled and professional youth migration this study is set to search for its determinants The findings are intended for a better and more informed policy formulation Assuming that at the beginning of the 21st Century West Africa s migratory trends to Europe have changed from predominantly regular to alarmingly irregular and clandestine this research also investigates the motivations behind this trend The focus of this study is the migration flow from West Africa to Europe using Ghana as a case study The Routledge Handbook of African Demography Clifford O. Odimegwu, Yemi Adewoyin, 2022-02-07 This handbook provides an authoritative and comprehensive overview of African population dynamics variations causes and consequences demonstrating the real world applications of research in policies and programmes African demography has come of age Over 50 years the discipline has grown exponentially in the number of training and research institutions specialist experts and academic output all with an aim of addressing the enormous demographic challenges faced by the continent The book draws on old and emerging analytical tools to explore the relationships between population dynamics and social economic cultural and political environments from African perspectives Key topics include fertility sexual behaviours healthcare ageing mortality migration displacement the causes and consequences of demographic changes and teaching and research developments in African demography The Routledge Handbook of African Demography will be an essential resource for students and researchers of African demography sociology development and cultural studies Class Formations and Inequality Structures in Contemporary African Migration John A. Arthur, 2014-10-15 This book examines the influences of social class and inequality structures on migration in Africa using information from Ghana As the country achieves moderate to significant economic gains driven in part by the country's diaspora communities the desire to migrate has intensified Migration is now synonymous with social mobility and self improvement It has been found that existing class and status inequalities are analytically inseparable from the social and cultural processes underpinning the motivations behind Ghanaian migration Migrant class and socioeconomic attributes are closely intertwined reinforcing and operating at every level of the migration decision making to influence the motivation to migrate the type and form of migration the direction of the migration its timing and ultimately the outcomes and expectations that migrants associate with their decision to migrate From a historical and contemporary perspective this book argues that power and class based structural relationships are significant components in understanding how migratory diasporas shape and are shaped in turn by social class and inequality The social class identities that Ghanaian immigrants manifest in the United States are often based on immigrant formulations and importation of class dynamics from the home country These identities are then transformed in the countries of destination and replayed or relived back home thereby creating multiple class identities that are powerful forces in inducing social changes In essence migrant social class attributes formed before and post migration is significant because it holds the possibilities of transforming the social structures of migrant sending countries As migrants return home and seek reintegration into the body polity of the home society conflicts emanating from changes in their class dynamics may hinder or promote sociocultural and economic development Hence the imperative of the central government is to understand and incorporate into national development planning the social class characteristics of its citizens who are leaving as well as those who are returning
