By then the biggest uncertainty in climate change is the atmospheric CO₂ and other greenhouse gas concentrations. Why? Because a consensus for setting an international target for CO₂ emissions has not been reached. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) has been working on this for years, but it is still unclear what the world will do. The IPCC is the only body that has been given the task of assessing the scientific basis for climate change and recommending actions to be taken. It is the only body that has been given the task of assessing the scientific basis for climate change and recommending actions to be taken. It is the only body that has been given the task of assessing the scientific basis for climate change and recommending actions to be taken.

From 1990 to 1994, the number of people who had been in the United States for 10 years or more increased from 1.5 million to 2.5 million. This increase was due to a combination of factors, including the fact that the number of people who had been in the United States for 10 years or more had been increasing steadily since 1980.
