

The Stonewall Riot

The Stonewall Riot was the beginning of the modern Gay/Lesbian Rights Movement. It was a result of years of discrimination and harassment of the Gay/Lesbian community. Police harassment and has been going on for years. Police would raid bars and upon entering they would force the patrons out onto the street, after writing down their names.

On one particular night, the 28th of June, as the community mourns the death of actress Judy Garland, the police target the Stonewall Inn on Christopher Street.

Many patrons leave the bar in distress but this time a handful of Lesbians and Drag Queens decide they are tired of being belittled and criminalized. They refuse to cooperate and begin taunting the police. They throw pennies taken from broken parking meters and then stones and bottles. The police charge themselves inside the bar and mass street demonstrations follow for the next two nights.

The following year in San Francisco hold marches and rallies to commemorate the riot. More and more Gay/Lesbian community events.

As each community grows the Gay/Lesbian rights, its pride event becomes a highly visible symbol of the success of the Gay/Lesbian Rights Movement.
