Developing Strategic

Leaders for the 21st Century Jeffrey D. McCausland, 2008 Emerging analysis of the American interagency and intergovernmental processes has underscored the nation's inability to respond effectively and coherently to contemporary national security demands. Modifications to various organizations and the overall interagency process have been recommended. These are clearly required but there has not been sufficient attention focused on the nonmilitary human capital required to meet the challenges of the 21st century. Specifically the Federal Government lacks a comprehensive process to ensure the recruitment, development, and retention of leaders capable of effectively integrating the contributions of specialized government agencies on behalf of larger national security interests. This new security environment requires people who are not only substantively qualified and knowledgeable of policy issues but also possess the leadership abilities to direct large, complex organizations.

Gender and Women's Leadership Karen O'Connor, 2010-08-18 This work within The SAGE Reference Series on Leadership provides undergraduate students with an authoritative reference resource on leadership issues specific to women and gender. Although covering historical and contemporary barriers to women's leadership and issues of gender bias and discrimination, this two-volume set focuses as well on positive aspects and opportunities for leadership in various domains and is centered on the 101 most important topics, issues, questions, and debates specific to women and gender. Entries provide students with more detailed information and depth of discussion than typically found in an encyclopedia entry but lack the jargon, detail, and density of a journal article. Key Features: Includes contributions from a variety of renowned experts; Focuses on women and public leadership in the American context; women's global leadership; women as leaders in the business sector, the nonprofit and social service sector, religion, academia, public policy, advocacy, the media, sports, and the arts; Addresses both the history of leadership within the realm of women and gender with examples from the lives of pivotal figures and the institutional settings and processes that lead to both opportunities and constraints unique to that realm; Offers an approachable, clear writing style directed at student researchers; Features more depth than encyclopedia entries with most chapters ranging between 6,000 and 8,000 words while avoiding the jargon and density often found in journal articles or research handbooks; Provides a list of further readings and references after each entry as well as a detailed index and an online version of the work to maximize accessibility for today's student audience.

Party Leaders and their Selection Rules in Western Europe Bruno Marino, 2021-09-23 This book analyses the determinants behind the openings in party leader selection rules, leaders' selectorate in 10 Western European countries and more than 55 parties between the mid 1980s and the mid 2010s. Presenting a novel and revealing theoretical and empirical framework, it tackles the impact of party change and the personalisation of politics, specifically using data coming from the first expert survey on the personalisation of politics in Western Europe, the PoPES. A quantitative analysis is paired with more in-depth explorations of two Italian parties, the Italian Communist Party, Democratic Party of the Left, the Northern League, and the missed opening of their leader selectorate. This book highlights the critical importance of studying party leader selection rules against the backdrop of allegedly declining parties and rising party leaders and concludes by placing its findings in a broader discussion about the future of Western European party leaders This book will be of key interest to scholars and students of political parties and party systems leadership political elites elections democracy and more widely of Western European politics and comparative politics
