

- Governance activities are centred on the board of the organization and the LSE guidance refers to these boards as supervisory and managerial boards.
- The corporate governance framework has two main components. These components are:
 - 1) the responsibilities, obligations and rewards of board members, and
 - 2) the fulfilment of stakeholder expectations, rights, participation and dialogue.
- The importance of board member responsibilities, obligations and rewards are emphasized and include arrangements for:
 - determining membership of the board;
 - accountability of board members;
 - delegation of authority from the board;
 - remuneration of board members.
