Chasing the Carrot Philip Gordon, Ph.d, 2014-04-08 The world has changed since the economic downturn and will never be the same again Ever increasing competition downsizing automation off shoring and outsourcing has changed what it means to be an employee the job for life is dead Companies can now no longer rely on pay and benefits alone to motivate and align their employees interests trust has been lost and they have become numb to threats To succeed in this increasingly competitive global economy businesses must work smarter and more sustainable At the core of this is effective personnel development The Chasing the Carrot offers a new paradigm demonstrating how to motivate increase creativity and foster leadership at all levels in the business reduces costs and improve outcomes Dr Philip Gordon PhD offers his invaluable insights from his career backed up with research and recent management thinking His LEAP model will transform you your people and the prospects of your business The world is changing ever faster and faster The ever increasing growth of internet ever thinner laptops and mobile phones can do more than a computer could do just a decade ago Now online giants such as Google have all but replaced the once popular Yellow Pages and Facebook only less than 10 years old has created a whole different social paradigm Prior to these revolutions few would have predicted with any accuracy what was about to happen the impact it would have on our lives and that things would never be the same again With all such change there is a period of time where the majority seek to cling to the status quo dismissing information that contradicts this reality Eventually a new norm is established and it is as if everybody knew it all along This is known as the Semmelweis effect after the Hungarian doctor who first pioneered the use of antiseptic solution to wash hands in obstetrical clinics to reduce the very high mortality rates on doctor s wards He was ridiculed by his peers and rejected by the medical community at large yet now everybody accepts the existence of germs that cannot be seen by the naked eye This book examines in detail these phenomena and more Well done Dr Peter Geissler Ph D CEO and Author A revolution is happening in the workplace Things are changing and will never ever be the same again Yet the majority are either rejecting this or are unaware of the extent of the change we are currently experiencing The drive for quicker and cheaper coupled against the backdrop of the global meltdown has resulted in the workforce being replaced by computers or labor in cheaper markets The question that people should be asking themselves is will there still be a job for me in the future and what will it be doing As a manager dealing with the ever changing and conflicting pressures you need to motivate your staff to meet the objectives of your team department and organisation This used to be done through the carrot of better pay and the stick threat of being side lined within the organisation or worse still sacked So what happens when the organisation no longer can afford the carrots and the workforce expects those annual pay raises and bonuses The carrot is now somewhat rotten As for the stick people are used to the constant threat of being made redundant and obsolete so they are somewhat numb to this threat If you aspire to be a great manager this book challenges your comfort zones and inspires you to be a great role model to your staff and your organisation

Becoming a Can-Do Leader Frank Satterthwaite, Jamie Millard, 2016-11-02 Manage without giving up the work you love and discover the leader within Conventional management thinking says that to manage effectively you must delegate It implies that managers fall into a dangerous trap when they continue to perform tasks they love from a previous role And it says that to not let go is to give in to a controlling tendency that robs staff of development opportunities But not everyone agrees Today s increasingly knowledge driven cost competitive work world is changing the way management gets done More and more people in management roles are becoming can do leaders who must continue to practice their specialty while managing and developing the skills of others But this group has had few guidelines to follow until now In Becoming a Can Do Leader executive coaches Frank Satterthwaite and Jamie Millard say it s time that management thinking catches up with reality Their extensive experience training and coaching player managers at all levels has shown that successful managers both delegate and do Whether you re trying to survive your first promotion or coaching executives who yearn to keep up with their field essential guidelines for can do leadership are inside this book You ll find workplace examples that ring true as well as unique strategies and tools that both help you identify your values and provide insight into your natural leadership style Don t let your knowledge and skills decline by stepping completely out of the professional picture It s time to get productively and selectively involved in the work enabling you to manage more effectively and keep up with important advances in your field all while developing and leading your team to success Discover how to work strategically with staff while continuing to grow expertise in your profession That s can do leadership Game
