Choate,2015-06-29 Excerpt from Abraham Lincoln and Other Addresses in England During my long residence in London as London as Ambassador of the United States it was my good fortune to be brought into close contact with the British people which gave me a unique opportunity to study their habits and characteristics and their social and political institutions My one instruction from President McKinley when he handed me my letter of credence was to promote the welfare of both countries by cultivating the most friendly relations between them To this end I visited many parts of Great Britain and wherever I went I found this message of good will most cordially reciprocated I thought that one effective way of carrying out this instruction was to do what I could to make the people better acquainted with the United States its history its institutions and its great men which would show them that there is no radical difference between us and that under different Constitutional forms we maintain with equal fidelity the same great causes of liberty and justice and human progress About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
