Acton A History:

Lectures on Modern History Lord Acton, 2016-11-10 Fellow Students I look back to day to a time before the middle of the century when I was reading at Edinburgh and fervently wishing to come to this University At three colleges I applied for admission and as things then were I was refused by all Here from the first I vainly fixed my hopes and here in a happier hour after five and forty years they are at last fulfilled I desire first to speak to you of that which I may reasonably call the Unity of Modern History as an easy approach to questions necessary to be met on the threshold by any one occupying this place which my predecessor has made so formidable to me by the reflected lustre of his name You have often heard it said that Modern History is a subject to which neither beginning nor end can be assigned No beginning because the dense web of the fortunes of man is woven without a void because in society as in nature the structure is continuous and we can trace things back uninterruptedly until we dimly descry the Declaration of Independence in the forests of Germany No end because on the same principle history made and history making are scientifically inseparable and separately unmeaning Acton On
