The University System and Economic Development in Mexico Since 1929 David Lorey, 1993-11-01 For decades Mexican leaders and scholars as well as outside observers have spoken of a Mexican university system in crisis expressing concern over student political activism and violence declining quality of instruction and facilities crowded campuses and lack of employment for graduates When the government harshly suppressed a student movement in 1968 world attention focused on the turmoil that was endemic in university life During the severe economic slump of the 1980s the fundamental weaknesses of the Mexican economy its inefficiency and inability to compete in the world were often attributed to failings of the university system Using original quantitative data on the graduates of all Mexican universities in a dozen major professional fields since 1929 the author explores the nature of this purported crisis by examining a series of questions about the Mexican university system How have the changing policy priorities of the Mexican government affected the university s education of professionals How have the Mexican economy s needs for professionals shaped the functioning of the university system Has Mexico trained enough professionals Have they been trained in the right fields Has the university been able to respond to demands for upward mobility through higher education The author s detailed analysis reveals a paradox to the extent that Mexican universities may not be producing the kinds of expertise needed for competing in the new global marketplace that educational quality has declined gradually over time and that the university has not contributed much to social mobility one may indeed speak of a crisis Yet because the university system has reached its present form in response to demands placed on it by government the economy and society responding pragmatically to circumstances beyond its control the author concludes that the crisis is not fundamentally a university crisis but rather one that lies in Mexican economy and society at large Multinational Corporations in Less Developed Countries William Harrison Courtney, 1974 Multinational Corporations in Less Developed Countries William H. Courtney, 1974 Catalog of Copyright Entries. Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office, 1971 A.I.D. Discussion Paper United States. Agency for International Development. Office of Program and Policy Coordination, 1969 The Economies of Argentina and Brazil Werner Baer, David V. Fleischer, 2011-01-01 This book compares the successes and failures of the development and growth processes of Argentina and Brazil It provides important insights into the different performances of these economies through a series of comparative essays written by Argentinian and Brazilian economists In the last 60 years Argentina and Brazil have both undergone a dramatic process of urbanization and industrialization While there are similarities between the two each country has dealt with the side effects in a different manner In this insightful book Argentinean and Brazilian economists expertly analyze their country s experiences with processes of industrialization the performance of the agricultural and service sectors the impact of foreign investments the distribution of income the roles of the state and the privatization experience and inflationary and stabilization experiences The contrast of the two emerging countries addressing these challenges will offer students economists and other social scientists significant new insights into the economic development process Many of the articles will also appeal to individuals in multinational corporations and banks that have to deal with emerging market economies
