Boy In The Blitz The 1940 Diary Of Colin Perry:

Boy in the Blitz Colin Perry, 2011-03-15 The only first hand account of the Blitz to be written as it was happening The Battle of London 1939-45 Jerry White, 2021-11-04 Endlessly fascinating White is such a brilliant historian Mail on Sunday Lasting for six long years the Blitz transformed life in the capital beyond recognition marking a time of almost constant anxiety disruption deprivation and sacrifice for Londoners With the capital the nation's frontline during the Second World War by its end 30 000 inhabitants had lost their lives While much has been written about the Myth of the Blitz its riveting social history has often been overlooked Unearthing what it was actually like for those living through those tempestuous years Jerry White paints a fascinating portrait of the daily lives of ordinary Londoners telling the story through their own voices As a history of the capital in wartime it is probably unsurpassable Sunday Telegraph An impressive history of the capital at war White an accomplished chronicler of London's history tells it with brio and a confident mastery of the sources Literary Review British Civilians in the Front Line Helen Jones, 2006-04-30 This is the first full length study of the behavior of British civilians and their reactions to air raids during the Second World War It unravels the day to day influence on people at these times of great danger risk and uncertainty and challenges the traditional image of civilians as passive shelterers under attack It uncovers Churchill and his government's desperate attempts to persuade key workers to continue with their work once the air raid siren had sounded and reveals the complex reasons why so many workers were willing to run such risks The Great Cat & Dog Massacre Hilda Kean, 2022-12-22 The tragedies of World War II are well known But at least one has been forgotten in September 1939 four hundred thousand cats and dogs were massacred in Britain The government vets and animal charities all advised against this killing So why would thousands of British citizens line up to voluntarily euthanize household pets In The Great Cat and Dog Massacre Hilda Kean unearths the history piecing together the compelling story of the life and death of Britain's wartime animal companions She explains that fear of imminent Nazi bombing and the desire to do something to prepare for war led Britons to sew blackout curtains dig up flower beds for vegetable patches send their children away to the countryside and kill the family pet in theory sparing them the suffering of a bombing raid Kean's narrative is gripping unfolding through stories of shared experiences of bombing food restrictions sheltering and mutual support Soon pets became key to the war effort providing emotional assistance and helping people to survive a contribution for which the animals gained government recognition Drawing extensively on new research from animal charities state archives diaries and family stories Kean does more than tell a virtually forgotten story She complicates our understanding of World War II as a good war fought by a nation of good people Accessibly written and generously illustrated Kean's account of this forgotten aspect of British history moves animals to center stage forcing us to rethink our assumptions about ourselves and the animals with whom we share our homes Bombing the City Aaron William Moore, 2018-10-18 World War II is enshrined in our collective memory as the good war a victory of good over evil However the bombing war has always troubled this narrative as total war transformed civilians into legitimate targets and raised unsettling questions such as whether it was possible for Allies and Axis alike to be victims of aggression In Bombing the City an unprecedented comparative history of how ordinary Britons and Japanese experienced bombing Aaron William Moore offers a major new contribution to these debates Utilising hundreds of diaries letters and memoirs he recovers the voices of ordinary people on both sides from builders doctors and factory workers to housewives students and policemen and reveals the shared experiences shaped by gender class race and age He reveals how it was that the British and Japanese public continued to support bombing elsewhere even as they experienced firsthand its terrible impact at home
