Aotearoa And New Zealand A Historical Geography:

Aotearoa & New Zealand Alan H. Grey, 1994 The past 200 years have seen the reconstruction of the world's human and biological geography through scientific and technical discovery economic and social change the expansion of populations and empires and wars Up to fifty million Europeans migrated to new lands sweeping aside or assimilating indigenous peoples and remaking landscapes in their search for prosperity within world spanning markets Sparsely populated and heavily forested Aotearoa was drawn into these events Robber economies and ranching were followed swiftly by intensive pastoral and agricultural development Out of the resulting destruction of forest for pasture New Zealand emerged becoming ever more urban like its British cultural hearth Alan Grey traces the context of New Zealand's becoming from uninhabited islands to 1935 when most aspects of today's landscapes were in place The result is essential reading for historians geographers and all with an interest in New Zealand's history and landscapes

The Making of New Zealand Cricket, 1832-1914 Greg Ryan, 2004 It is generally forgotten that cricket rather than rugby union was the national game in New Zealand until the early years of the twentieth century This book shows why and how cricket developed in New Zealand and how its character changed across time Greg Ryan examines the emergence and growth of cricket in relation to diverse patterns of European settlement in New Zealand such as the systematic colonization schemes of Edward Gibbon Wakefield and the gold discoveries of the 1860s He then considers issues such as cricket and social class in the emerging cities cricket and the elite school system the function of the game in shaping relations between the New Zealand provinces cricket encounters with the Australian colonies in the context of an Australasian world A central theme is cricketing relations with England at a time when New Zealand society was becoming acutely conscious of both its own identity and its place within the British Empire This imperial relationship reveals structures ideals and objectives unique to New Zealand Articulate engaging and entertaining Ryan demonstrates convincingly how the cricketing experience of New Zealand was quite different from that of other colonies
