A Climatological Perspective M. Yoshino, Manfred Domrös, Annick Douguédroit, J. Paszynski, L.C. Nkemdirim, 2013-06-29 The impact of climate on human activities and the effect of humans on climate are two of the most important areas of inquiry in climatology. These interactions conducted through physical, chemical, and biological processes were described as early as Roman and Greek times. Marcus Vitruvius 75-25 B.C., a famous Roman engineer and architect, made the following observation about the climatic conditions necessary for founding a city: Land ideal for the health is slightly elevated and there should be neither fog nor frost. The direction of the slope and the distance to the swamps, lakes, and beaches must also be considered. The prevailing wind directions observed by a wind tower at the center of the city, like the Horologium at Athens, should be taken into consideration in city planning. The main and narrow streets should be placed in the middle angle of the two prevailing wind directions. Then the location of the Pantheons and squares should be decided. The influence of humans on climate was a major subject for discussion in the 19th century, inspired in part by the rapid industrial growth and expanding deforestation of the time. D.L. Howard wrote brilliant pieces on the climate of London in the 1830s, while G.P. Marsh discussed the effects of forests on precipitation in the U.S.A. in the second half of the 19th century. International Directory of Building Research Information and Development Organizations Studies and Documentation, International Council for Building Research, 2006-01-16 Every entry follows a standard pattern: after the address and telephone number of the institution, there is a brief description of its history and financial support, followed by the names of the senior staff, total number of staff, the institution's structure and services, its main research programmes, and a list of its publications. For this new edition, a subject index has been added, allowing the reader to identify centres of research activity on individual construction topics throughout the world. The world-wide investment in construction industry research is enormous. This unique directory is a guidebook to that investment, which will enable its readers to isolate sources of advice on practical problems, information on national standards and requirements, and potential research collaborators. Interactions of Energy and Climate W. Bach, J. Pankrath, J. Williams, 2012-12-06 Since the beginning of industrialization in the last century, a steady increase in energy consumption can be observed. At the same time, energy generation switched from wood and coal to predominantly oil, coal, and natural gas. Soon, many countries became aware of the fact that the resources of fossil fuels, especially of oil and natural gas, are finite. Diversification of energy sources became a requirement for the future. Governments expressed their concern by setting up natural energy programmes, while international organisations undertook assessments of the global energy resources and possible rates of supply and substitution. When it comes to setting up energy policies, the following factors must be taken into consideration: population growth, level and nature of socio-economic activity, the costs of energy, the adequacy and reliability of supply the availability of technology and supporting infrastructure the success of energy conservation programmes and concern about the environment safety aspects of production and use of energy as well as educational efforts toward a rational use of energy When we express our most urgent concern the long term global energy provision experts offer four interrelated partial strategies the strategy of rational use and conservation of energy the strategy of using renewable energy sources the coal strategy including coal gasification and liquefaction the nuclear power strategy Any strategy however for securing future energy supply has from my point of view to be thoroughly examined as to its impact on the environment
