

Gen. prof. Prof. (Lecture 10: BHK)

During gene expression there is a need to produce functional proteins. This involves the process of translation.

Translation: process of a gene which is taking place in the cytoplasm and is controlled by the genetic code. It is the process of synthesizing a protein from an mRNA template.

Gene: is a portion of a DNA molecule, or a sequence of nucleotides that codes for a polypeptide. (Lecture 10: BHK)

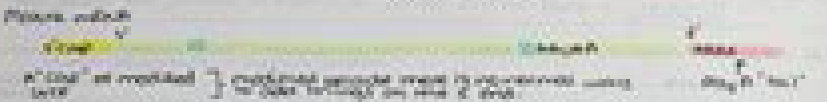

Gene processing: organization of both primary transcripts into functional genes.

Example: 1) for independent structural elements within a genome.

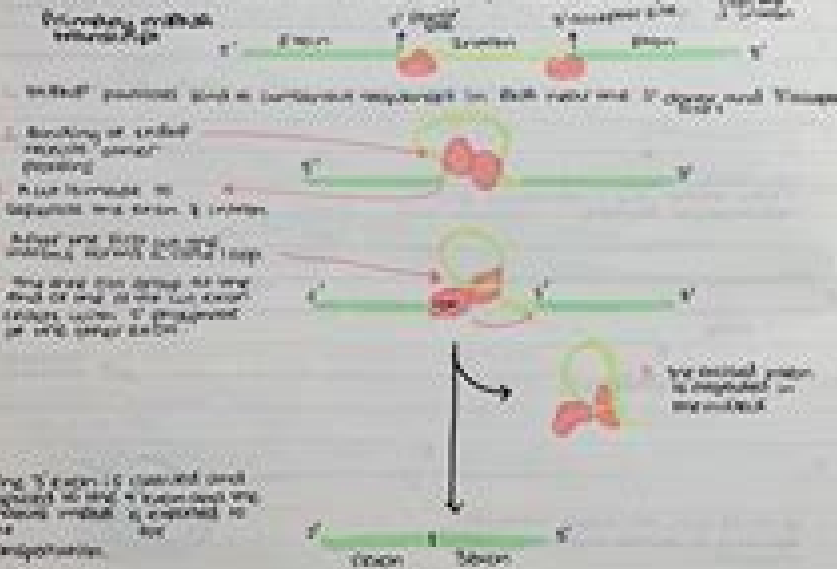

2) for polypeptides, the genes are organized into a single unit, the gene, which is a single unit.

3) for polypeptides, the genes are organized into a single unit, the gene, which is a single unit.

For gene processing requires the initial transcript for translation.

Gene splicing: The final stage of gene processing, in which the introns are removed and the exons are joined together to form a continuous sequence of nucleotides (mRNA).
