

Prehistoric clothing

There are no exact certainties as to when the human being started wearing clothes. The anthropologists estimate that it started about 100,000 and 500,000 years ago. The first garments were made of skins and animal leather, furts and furs, or bones and shells. This is why there are very scarce remains of them which were preserved. Simple needles made of bone are evidence that leather clothes were worn at least 30,000 years ago.

Excluding that information

About 100,000 years ago, the climate had gradually become more stable, so that the average temperatures of the glacial periods, they learned and their neighbors, and also some of the processes in the use of various kinds of clothing. The man of the Old-Middle, the direct predecessor of modern humans (100,000 years ago), started using hair materials to manufacture warm clothes, more elaborated throughout time, he prepared the moccasins and moccasins, with which he covered the entire body. He also used substances that came through the decomposition of the skin and fat to make the skins with which he covered the body and the feet.

Between wife and brother

During the Mesolithic era, between the 11,000 and 8,000 BC, the weather started changing and becoming less cold. The hunter kept wearing clothes of animal leather and skins, although less rudimentary than that of his predecessors. Thanks to the fact that tools had reached a significant development.
