

Baby Camel and His Mother

Copyright@ Bedtimeshortstories.com

Once upon a time, there lived a baby camel with her mother. One fine day as they were lying on the ground, the baby camel was deep in her thoughts. When mother camel asked what was wrong with her, baby camel did not answer her.

The next day, when baby camel could not resist anymore, she asked, "Why do the camels have humps?" The mother smiled and said, "Well, as we are desert animals, the humps help us to store the water for many days and because of this, we can survive without water".

The baby camel asked, "Why do camels have long legs and rounded feet?" To this, the mother said, "These are meant for walking in the hot desert. These long legs and rounded feet help the camels to walk in the desert better than anyone does!" The curious baby camel again asked, "Mother, why do we have long eyelashes? Sometimes it bothers my sight". Mother camel with pride replied, "My dear child, these long thick eyelashes are your protective cover. They help us to protect the eyes from the desert sand and wind".

Baby Camel after thinking said, "Oh, I see. The hump helps us in storing the water when we are in the desert, the legs are for walking through the desert and these eyelashes protect our eyes from the desert than what in god's name are we doing here in the Zoo?" This time, mother camel went speechless.

Researching animal research Gail Davies, Beth Greenhough, Pru Hobson-West, Robert G. W. Kirk, Alexandra Palmer, Emma Roe, 2024-01-09. Every year around 80 million scientific procedures are carried out on animals globally. These experiments have the potential to generate new understandings of biology and clinical treatments. They also give rise to ongoing societal debate. This book demonstrates how the humanities and social sciences can contribute to understanding what is created through animal procedures, including constitutional forms of research governance, different institutional cultures of care, the professional careers of scientists and veterinarians, collaborations with patients and publics, and research animals specially bred for experiments or surplus to requirements. Developing the idea of the animal research nexus, this book explores how connections and disconnections are made between these different elements, how these have reshaped each other historically, and how they configure the current practice and policy of UK animal research.
