La Niña and the Making of Climate Optimism Julia Miller, 2019-07-12 This book examines the deep connection Australians have with their climate to understand contemporary views on human induced climate change It is the first study of the Australian relationship with La Niña and it explains how fundamental this relationship is to the climate change debate both locally and globally While unease with the Australian environment was a hallmark of early settler relations with a new continent this book argues that the climate itself quickly became a source of hope and linked to progress Once observed weather patterns coalesced into recognizable cycles of wet and dry years and Australians adopted a belief in the certainty of good seasons It was this optimistic response to climate linked to La Niña that laid the groundwork for this relationship with the Australian environment This book will appeal to scholars and students of the environmental humanities history and science as well as anyone concerned about climate change

How Journalism Uses History Martin Conboy, 2013-09-13 How Journalism Uses History examines the various ways in which journalism uses history and historical sources in order to better understand the relationships between journalists historians and journalism scholars It highlights the ambiguous overlap between the role of the historian and that of the journalist and underlines that there no longer seems to be reason to accept that one begins only where the other ends With Journalism Studies as a developing subject area throughout the world journalism history is becoming a particularly vivacious field As such How Journalism Uses History argues that if historical study of this kind is to achieve its full potential there needs to be a fuller and more consistent engagement with other academics studying the past political social and cultural historians in particular but also scholars working in politics sociology literature and linguistics Contributors in this book discuss the core themes which inform history s relationship with journalism from a wide range of geographical and methodological perspectives They aim to create more ambitious conversations about using journalism both as a source for understanding the past and for clarifying ideas about its role as constituent of the public sphere in using discourse and tradition to connect contemporary audiences with history This book was originally published as a special issue of Journalism Practice
