Australia In Southeast Asia Regionalisation And Democracy Nias Reports

Sebastian Brünink

Australia In Southeast Asia Regionalisation And Democracy Nias Reports:

Australia in Southeast Asia Erik Charles Paul, 1998 Australia's place in the global economy is linked to South East Asia. Recent conflicts highlight a clash between countries that do not share common values about individuals' political and civil rights as the legitimate basis for their sovereignty. Development, Decentralization and Democracy Robert

Thörlind, 2000 This book explores the controversy in political science surrounding the civil society social capital paradigm by studying the performance of decentralized governments in West Bengal and Bangladesh. Gram panchayats and NGOs provide the focus of the study. The study intends to determine whether a growth in social capital can explain why decentralized governments seem to be more effective in West Bengal though both areas decentralized their governments around the same time. The two regions have shared for centuries a common history, civic culture, ethnic identity and language though religion led to the separation of the regions. Bon, Buddhism and Democracy Per Kvaerne, Per Kværne, Rinzin Thargyal, 1993

European Newsletter of Southeast Asian Studies, 1998 The State and the Iron Industry in Han China Donald B. Wagner, 2001 This book brings both literary and archaeological evidence to bear in an investigation of the history of the Han state's iron monopoly and considers the reasons for its establishment and the intense opposition it provoked. Indonesia and the Muslim World Anak Agung Banyu Perwita, 2007 Annotation This book explores the position of Islam as one of the domestic political variables in Indonesia's foreign policy during the Soeharto era. It argues that the foreign policy of Indonesia toward the Muslim world under Soeharto was increasingly the result of political struggles between domestic actors, particularly the Muslim community and the State. State Growth and Social Exclusion in Tibet Andrew Martin

Fischer, 2005 The most pressing economic challenges facing the Tibetan areas of western China relate to the marginalization of the majority of Tibetans from rapid state-led growth. The urban-rural divide plays an important role in this polarized dynamic but alone only partially explains differences with other Chinese regions all of which generally exhibit strong spatial inequalities. This book therefore focuses on several further factors that determine the ethnically exclusionary character of current peripheral growth in the Tibetan areas. These include processes of urbanization, immigration, employment and education as key factors underlying structural economic change. Democratising Indonesia Mikaela Nyman, 2006

The fall of Suharto has drawn much media and academic attention but the focus has been on the elite perspective, the role of the regime and military and little has been published on civil society. Gender issues are also often bypassed. Indonesia is at a crossroads and the greater involvement of civil society is being seriously considered for the first time by government representatives and demanded by civil society actors, political think tanks and social commentators. This study, which covers the lead up to and ousting of Suharto up until the 2004 democratic elections, analyses the role of civil society in Indonesia's transition towards democracy by applying social movement theory and the framework of political opportunities. It shows the importance of social movements as civil society's primary catalysts for change and the need for a strong civil society to take over where the social movements left off in order to consolidate attitudinal changes in the political economic and social spheres The actions and limitations of various parts of the Indonesian pro democracy movement are discussed providing case studies of three groups of actors the student movement the women s movement and the labour movement focusing on times when they have joined forces to form social movements The shortcomings and successes of the pro democracy movement are discussed as are the prospects for civil society in the future Individualism and Collectivism Uichol Kim, Ŭi-ch'öl Kim, 1995 Migration in China Børge Bakken, 1998 Economic reform in China has led to migration of people on a scale never before seen in the country Since China s new industrial revolution began in the late 1970s there has been a flow of tens of millions of surplus rural labourers and their families moving from rural to urban areas This phenomenon has been described in terms of both a blessing for China s economic development and a threat against its social order This volume examines the different aspects of internal Chinese migration including a brief introduction to current research and pointers to the methodological traps that can occur in the field
