RAYMOND CHANDLER
1888-1959

Raymond Chandler was born in Chicago in 1888. His parents divorced when he was young and his mother moved to England where he was raised and educated. After serving with the Canadian forces and the R.A.F. in WWI, he returned to the United States. He married Pearl Cecily Hurlburt in 1924. Many believe that because his mother became a naturalized British subject that he by law was also a British citizen. Chandler vigorously denied this. His hard-boiled, realistic writing style has been imitated by many. Like Hammett's Sam Spade, Chandler's Philip Marlowe is the prototype for the "private eye." He was the recipient of the Mystery Writers of America Edgar Allan Poe Award (for screenplay) in 1946 and again in 1954 (for novel). Raymond Chandler died on March 26, 1959.
