

Reading is a language skill which can be developed through constant practice. As some scholars found out, you can widen your vocabulary and develop skills in writing when you read. But reading can be more meaningful if it will be viewed as an interactive process between the writer and the reader. As a reader, you interact with what you read by asking questions, analyzing the assertions, adding your own understanding, and relating your experience to the message.

Basic Reading Skills

The following are various skills which can enhance your reading experience and make you an effective reader.

1. Rapid Reading – aims to locate specific information or main ideas in a very short span of time.
 - a. Skimming – it is a type of quick reading which aims to get the main idea and get an overview of the material.
Techniques for effective skimming:
 - i. Use your finger as a guide when reading across the line.
 - ii. Focus more on the first and last sentences of each paragraph; they usually contain the main idea of the text.
 - b. Locating the main idea – identification of the central message of a reading selection.
Techniques in locating the main idea:
 - i. Identify the topic or the subject of a text.
 - ii. Take note the transitional devices such as thus, therefore, to conclude and to sum up, as they may signal the main idea.
 - iii. Validate your identified main idea by analyzing if all supporting details directly or indirectly support it.
 - c. Scanning – it is a quick reading strategy which aims to get the specific information from a given text.
Techniques:
 - i. Be clear with the information that you need.
 - ii. Avoid reading every word; focus on what you need.
2. Previewing – is a skill wherein the reader looks over the material and focuses on the information he/she finds relevant.
Effective previewing involves clarifying the purpose, reading the title and headings, and checking the illustration and other visuals.
*Browsing - inspecting unhurriedly the table of contents, introduction, or summary.
3. Literal Reading – involves the understanding of ideas and facts that are directly stated in the printed material.
 - a. Summarizing – it is a reading skill that involves condensing a lengthy text into a shorter passage which is usually 15 to 30 percent of the source material.
Strategies:
 - i. Annotate, i.e., add notes to the original text to highlight important ideas, but avoid putting your own comments.
 - ii. If you are summarizing a text with multiple paragraphs, get the main idea of each paragraph and write them in your own words.
