An Economic Blueprint For Ghana:

An Economic Blueprint for Ghana T. E. Anin, 2003 Ghana imports 100 million rice a year mainly from Thailand and the US which represents an unsustainable burden on the country's trade and exchange balances and primary cause of devastation to the national economy This book first provides an account of economic developments in the country since 1920 arguing that this is a period largely characterised by over dependency on cocoa It examines the extent to which past Ghanaian governments have succeeded in providing citizens with basic needs food water clothing and shelter and compares Ghana's economic performance with countries which were in comparable or worse economic positions in the 1960s and 1970s such as Malaysia whose economic growth and sustainability have surpassed the performance of Ghana The author then presents a blueprint or Kufuor Plan addressed directly to the President The plan designed for immediate implementation calls for active official encouragement for a nation wide industrial policy based on small scale agriculture and which uses local resources to generate profits for the country Recovering Storytelling for Ghanaian Preaching Akwasi O. Ofori, 2015-04-15 This book explores the role narrative can play to renew preaching in Ghanaian congregations It does this by describing and classifying models of preaching in North America and applies those models to the Ghanaian situation carefully guarding against assuming that a western model can be adapted without question

The Economics of Chocolate Mara P.

Squicciarini, Johan Swinnen, 2016-01-21 This book written by global experts provides a comprehensive and topical analysis on the economics of chocolate While the main approach is economic analysis there are important contributions from other disciplines including psychology history government nutrition and geography The chapters are organized around several themes including the history of cocoa and chocolate from cocoa drinks in the Maya empire to the growing sales of Belgian chocolates in China how governments have used cocoa and chocolate as a source of tax revenue and have regulated chocolate and defined it by law to protect consumers health from fraud and industries from competition how the poor cocoa producers in developing countries are linked through trade and multinational companies with rich consumers in industrialized countries and how the rise of consumption in emerging markets China India and Africa is causing a major boom in global demand and prices and a potential shortage of the world's chocolate
