

Congress consists of...

100 Senators and...

435 Representatives

To be a senator
you must be at least 30 years old, a U.S. citizen for at least seven years, and a resident of the state you represent.

To be a representative
you must be at least 25 years old, a U.S. citizen for at least seven years, and a resident of the state you represent.

Senators are elected directly by the citizens of each state. Each state has two senators.

Representatives are elected by the citizens of each state. Each state has a certain number of representatives.

As the head of the Senate, the vice president presides over the Senate. The vice president is the second highest officer in the U.S. government.

The House of Representatives is the lower house of Congress. It is the largest and most powerful of the two houses.

Senators are elected for six years. Unlike the president, there is no limit to the number of times a senator can be re-elected.

The number of representatives for each state is based on the number of people living there. The term of office is only two years, but representatives can run for re-election as many times as they like.

Who's in charge of the Senate?
The vice president presides over the Senate. The vice president is the second highest officer in the U.S. government. The vice president is also the president of the Senate.

But the real power is in the hands of the Senate majority leader and the Senate minority leader. They decide who will be in the committee and which bills will be considered.

2 only the Senate can do this approve or reject treaties with other countries
approve or reject appointments to the federal government

Committee
A group of members of Congress who work together to study a particular issue and make recommendations to the full Congress.

Subcommittee
A group of members of a committee who work together to study a particular issue and make recommendations to the full committee.

Staff
The people who work for the members of Congress. They help them with their work and represent them in the public.

There are many jobs in Congress. Some are very important, and some are not.

Who's in charge of the House?
The speaker of the House is the most powerful member of the House. The speaker is elected by the members of the House. The speaker is also the president of the House.

2 only the House can do this approve or reject bills
approve or reject treaties with other countries
