Biodiversity Management Rural De:

Community Biodiversity Management Walter Simon de Boef, Abishkar Subedi, Nivaldo Peroni, Marja Thijssen, Elizabeth O'Keeffe, 2013-03-12 The conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity are issues that have been high on the policy agenda since the first Earth Summit in Rio in 1992 As part of efforts to implement in situ conservation a methodology referred to as community biodiversity management CBM has been developed by those engaged in this arena CBM contributes to the empowerment of farming communities to manage their biological resources and make informed decisions on the conservation and use of agrobiodiversity This book is the first to set out a clear overview of CBM as a methodology for meeting socio environmental changes CBM is shown to be a key strategy that promotes community resilience and contributes to the conservation of plant genetic resources The authors present the underlying concepts and theories of CBM as well as its methodology and practices and introduce case studies primarily from Brazil Ethiopia France India and Nepal Contributors include farmers leaders of farmers organizations professionals from conservation and development organizations students and scientists The book offers inspiration to all those involved in the conservation and use of agrobiodiversity within livelihood development and presents ideas for the implementation of farmers rights The wide collection of experiences illustrates the efforts made by communities throughout the world to cope with change while using diversity and engaging in learning processes It links these grassroots efforts with debates in policy arenas as a means to respond to the unpredictable changes such as climate change that communities face in sustaining their livelihoods

Biodiversity Management in Rural Development Natural Resources Institute (Great Britain), Great Britain. Department for International Development, 2002-01 This work takes a cross disciplinary approach to examine how better to accommodate biodiversity concerns in situations where poverty reduction and welfare improvement are the primary aims of development It will be of interest to all people with a practical interest in managing biological resources or biodiversity in developing countries those with a similar concern for economic or social development and improving the livelihoods of the rural poor and also to staff of governments donor agencies NGOs and other organizations with responsibility for rural development or biodiversity conservation and management

Community Seed Banks Ronnie Vernooy, Pitambar Shrestha, Bhuwon Sthapit, 2015-05-15 Community seed banks first appeared towards the end of the 1980s established with the support of international and national non governmental organizations This book is the first to provide a global review of their development and includes a wide range of case studies Countries that pioneered various types of community seed banks include Bangladesh Brazil Ethiopia India Nepal Nicaragua the Philippines and Zimbabwe In the North a particular type of community seed bank emerged known as a seed savers network Such networks were first established in Australia Canada the UK and the USA before spreading to other countries Over time the number and diversity of seed banks has grown In Nepal for example there are now more than 100

self described community seed banks whose functions range from pure conservation to commercial seed production In Brazil community seed banks operate in various regions of the country Surprisingly despite 25 years of history and the rapid growth in number organizational diversity and geographical coverage of community seed banks recognition of their roles and contributions has remained scanty The book reviews their history evolution experiences successes and failures and reasons why challenges and prospects It fills a significant gap in the literature on agricultural biodiversity and conservation and their contribution to food sovereignty and security

Agrobiodiversity, Community Participation and Landscapes in Agroecology Tomás Enrique León-Sicard ,Diego Griffon,Massimo De Marchi,2024-08-20 Maintaining and managing agrobiodiversity is a key issue proposed by agroecology not only to maintain high agricultural productivity but also to increase the resilience stability and sustainability of the agroecosystems meant as the functional relationship between the natural assets and the human use of them at farm and farm matrix scale The main hypothesis of this approach is that the greater the interactions between organisms of different trophic levels edaphic organisms multiple crops weed plants herbivores carnivores plants in living fences corridors or forest patches within agroecosystems the greater will be the possibilities of obtaining abundant and varied harvests with fewer external inputs pesticides fertilizers and better environmental performance The agrobiodiversity is meant as the variety and the disposition of the cultivations pastures farms that affect the soil properties and create habitat diversity landscape diversity and connectivity At the level of landscapes or territories the set of biodiverse agroecosystems generate natural matrices that have a powerful impact on the recovery and restoration of forest corridors which in turn positively influence many ecosystem services for nature conservation and free movement and recovery of many populations of animal species including those in danger of extinction

Tropical Fruit Tree Diversity Bhuwon Sthapit,Hugo Lamers,Ramanatha Rao,Arwen Bailey,2016-05-12 Farmers have developed a range of agricultural practices to sustainably use and maintain a wide diversity of crop species in many parts of the world This book documents good practices innovated by farmers and collects key reviews on good practices from global experts not only from the case study countries but also from Brazil China and other parts of Asia and Latin America A good practice for diversity is defined as a system organization or process that over time and space maintains enhances and creates crop genetic diversity and ensures its availability to and from farmers and other users Drawing on experiences from a UNEP GEF project on Conservation and Sustainable Use of Wild and Cultivated Tropical Fruit Tree Diversity for Promoting Livelihoods Food Security and Ecosystem Services with case studies from India Indonesia Malaysia and Thailand the authors show how methods for identifying good practices are still evolving and challenges in scaling up remain They identify key principles effective as a strategy for mainstreaming good practice into development efforts Few books draw principles and lessons learned from good practices This book fills this gap by combining good practices from the research project on tropical fruit trees with chapters from external experts to broaden its scope and relevance

Routledge Handbook of Agricultural Biodiversity Danny Hunter, Luigi Guarino, Charles Spillane, Peter C. McKeown, 2017-10-03 The world relies on very few crop and animal species for agriculture and to supply its food needs In recent decades there has been increased appreciation of the risk this implies for food security and quality especially in times of environmental change As a result agricultural biodiversity has moved to the top of research and policy agendas This Handbook presents a comprehensive overview of our current knowledge of agricultural biodiversity in a series of specially commissioned chapters It draws on multiple disciplines including plant and animal genetics ecology crop and animal science food studies and nutrition as well as social science subjects which explore the socio economic cultural institutional legal and policy aspects of agricultural biodiversity It focuses not only on the core requirements to deliver a sustainable agriculture and food supply but also highlights the additional ecosystem services provided by a diverse and resilient agricultural landscape and farming practices The book provides an indispensable reference textbook for a wide range of courses in agriculture ecology biodiversity conservation and environmental studies

Integrating Biodiversity in Agricultural Intensification Jitendra Srivastava, 1999 Southeastern Nigeria has some of the highest population densities in Sub Saharan Africa and one of the most threatened ecosystems on the continent the rainforests of West Africa As population pressure has mounted fallow periods have declined Instead of doggedly pursuing old strategies farmers shifted their agricultural practices in the face of mounting population pressures Farmers have intensified their traditional bush fallow cultivation system by adopting several strategies What agrobiodiversity is what it does and its importance to the environment and agriculture form the bases of discussion in this volume Agrobiodiversity is defined as biological resources that directly and indirectly contribute to crop and livestock production With the need to increase food production and to concurrently protect the environment a worldwide priority agrobiodiversity is arguably the single most important natural resource It is key to transforming agricultural systems that are currently wreaking havoc on wildlife and human health This report highlights case studies in which modern and traditional agriculture has successfully transformed to enhance biodiversity without sacrificing yield Lessons learned from this review help to identify sound practices for designing and monitoring agricultural projects so that they improve rural incomes while safeguarding environmental assets particularly biodiversity Suggestions for sound practices include modifications of the policy environment and ways to strengthen research institutions and extension services so that agriculture can be intensified while better protecting and managing biological resources
